MEXICO AND U. S. OIL PRODUCERS REACH AGREEMENT

Decree Cutting Taxes to 40 Per Cent of Original Levy Drafted and Expected to Be Signed Soon.

INCOME TO APPLY ON FOREIGN DEBT

Early Adjustment of Indebtedness to New York Bankers Predicted—Premature Publication Recalled.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 20.—Secretary of the Treasury de la Huerta last night requested newspaper correspondents to postpone publication of the outline of a decree given out earlier in the day, embodying the basis upon which the Mexican Government and the American oil companies had reached an agreement relative to the payment of export taxes. His request followed receipt of telegraphic information from New York, the nature of which he did not disclose. (The terms of the decree were published throughout the United States last night, the Secretary's request being received after the publication time of the morning newspapers.)

Samuel Deache, secretary to Governor Morin, Mexican financial agent in New York, left New York for this city yesterday and it is possible his trip has some connection with the request that the decree be held in abeyance. The decree lacks only the signature of President Obregon to become effective.

Secretary de la Huerta's decision was sudden, as he had personally given copies of the document to the newspaper men and the Mexican City representatives of the American oil companies had been furnished copies.

No Hitches in Negotiations Expected.

It was not believed here that the Secretary's request for postponement of the publication portends a serious turn in the negotiations with either the oil men or the bankers, but that he wishes every possible phase of the arrangement to be agreed upon and understood thoroughly before the formal decree is given out.

The project contemplates the payment of 40 per cent of the tax as originally imposed by the June decree, and means the payment to the Mexican Treasury of approximately 13,500,000 pesos ($6,750,000). It is understood that representatives of the oil companies have received instructions to pay the taxes for the most part in gold (amounting as the collections from this tax are to be applied on the Mexican foreign debt).

As explained by representatives of the oil companies, the project means that the original tax had been reduced to 40 per cent and entrance taxes due from June 7 to Dec. 31, 1921. One of the representatives of the oil companies said that the export taxes from Jan. 1 of the present year are not subject to the provisions of the decree and probably will be the subject of further discussions between the Mexican treasury representatives and the oil men, with a possible visit by the American oil men to Mexico City in the near future.

It is expected that President Obregon will sign the decree as soon as he returns to the capital from Vera Cruz, probably tomorrow.

Settlement in 10 Days Foreseen.

Minister de la Huerta 10 days ago made the statement that he would see a settlement of Mexico's financial affairs, and the publication of the proposed decree is taken in some quarters to indicate that the oil payment will carry an adjustment of the outstanding indebtedness to New York bankers.

It is understood that the Minister expects the decree to be signed so that the oil men can start payment on Tuesday or Wednesday, and arrangements have been made for depositing all sums in the Banco Nacional de Mexico against foreign indebtedness. It is also expected that the oil payment will be announced simultaneously with the publication of the oil decree.

Another financial matter settled yesterday by the Treasury Department was with regard to the issuance of bonds for the liquidation of the debt created during the Carranza administration, when 25 per cent of the salaries of Federal employees was retained by the Government. This sum is said to approximate 13,000,000 pesos ($6,500,000), and will be liquidated with the bonds, which are to be distributed to those who failed to receive full salary under Carranza. The Government urges the holders not to sell to brokers, but to retain the bonds for redemption on dates specified.

MISS MATHILDE MCCORMICK.

MISS M'CORMICK HAS HER FATHER'S CONSENT TO WED

16-Year-Old Granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller to Marry Swiss, Harvester Head Announces.

STATEMENT BY COUSIN OF OSER

Chicago Interior Decorator Declares Max Oser Is Son of German Nobleman and Is 57 Years Old.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—Mathilde McCormick, 16 years old, has received permission of her father, Harold F. McCormick, to marry Max Oser, a horseman of Zurich, Switzerland. McCormick announced the engagement last night in a statement. He said the announcement was "hastened a few weeks by the fact of the recent newspaper publicity."

McCormick's announcement followed a day of family conference. The statement was issued through the butler at the home of Mrs. Cyrus McCormick, mother of the harvester president, and no intimation was made as to when the wedding will take place.

Miss Mathilde, who came home from Switzerland with her governess a month ago to seek her father's consent to the wedding, is planning to return to her home in Zurich, where she has lived since she was 8 years old, in a short time.

The formal announcement says: "Mr. Harold F. McCormick, proprietor of the engagement of his daughter, Miss Mathilde, to Mr. Max Oser of Berne, Switzerland. The announcement is hastened a few weeks by the fact of the recent newspaper publicity."

Though all comment was refused at the McCormick home, it is understood that the engagement has been approved by Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, who recently obtained a divorce from Mr. McCormick.

Miss Mathilde is one of the heirs to the great fortunes of John D. Rockefeller and Cyrus Hall McCormick, inventor of the reaping machine.

Miss McCormick went to Switzerland eight years ago for medical treatment, and has made her home there ever since, spending a great part of her time out of doors, tramping over the mountains and riding her favorite horses, often in company with Oser, whose riding academy she attended.

Dislikes Parties.

All traces of the early infection which necessitated her living in Switzerland have disappeared and she is now a tall, straight-limbed, black-haired girl, with large black eyes and pleasant, though not regular, features.

Two newspaper men who were her guests at tea yesterday she disclosed she disliked "parties" and prefers the quiet of her country home in Switzerland, where she rides, tramps, knits, plays the piano and reads.

Telling the interviewers how her father had caught her "doing something with long needles," she said with a laugh:

"I was knitting. You know I'm used to the country, and about all there is to do in the country is to knit and read and ride and play the piano and those are the things I love."

She is as unlike the typical American society girl as she is unlike the typical continental society girl. Speaking with a half-German, half-French accent, she entertained the reporters with an account of her progress in acquiring American slang. "I can say 'open your mouth and let the moonshine in,'" she boasted, and in response to the general laugh which followed, added, "I guess that's the dope."

Doesn't Like the City.

Asked how long she expected to remain in this country, Miss McCormick said:

"Oh, I don't know how long. I was here last year for two months—that's all I could bear. I don't know how long I'll be able to stand it this time. You know, I don't care for parties, or the city, or society. I'm so used to the country."

While here she is making her home with her governess and a companion in the old Cyrus Hall McCormick mansion on Rush street, a stone's throw from Michigan boulevard and almost under the shadow of the loop skyscrapers. This has been McCormick's home since he was divorced a few weeks ago and turned over his Lake Shore drive

AGENTS RESISTED IN LIQUOR RAIDS ON THREE BARROOMS

Warrant Is Issued Against Douglas Baker, One of Squad, Following Wounding of Saloon Man.

GUS NATIONS STRUCK ON HEAD IN ROW

Entry to One Barroom Effected by Breaking Down Door—Customers Fight at Another Place.

A warrant charging Douglas Baker, a Federal prohibition enforcement agent, with assault with intent to kill, was issued at Clayton this afternoon as a result of one of three raids in which prohibition enforcement agents met with lively resistance.

The warrant was based on the shooting of Henry Kraemer, proprietor of a saloon at 7343 Manchester avenue, Maplewood, in a fight there Saturday night, when Gus O. Nations, chief enforcement officer, was wounded. Nations was hit in the head by a force of five assistants into the saloon. It was sworn to by Henry Kraemer Jr., son of the wounded man, before Justice of the Peace Stecker.

As a result of the night's activities, Nations has a bump on his head from a blow that knocked him down, and he tells of having grappled with the throat and disarmed a man who opposed his efforts. Other stirring events of the night's raids were the knocking down of a resister by another enforcement agent and the breaking in of a saloon door.

Nations today said that he and five assistants had entered Kraemer's saloon and that when two of the assistants went behind the bar, Henry Kraemer Jr. reached over the bar and threw to the floor a bottle that was on the drain board. He said he grappled with young Kraemer and that the father came to his son's assistance. Several customers of the place joined in and there was a free-for-all fight.

Bomb Shattered by Bullet.

They reached the sidewalk and then someone struck Nations on the head, knocking him down. A shot was fired which struck Kraemer in the left leg between the ankle and the knee, shattering the bone.

Two of the agents went in the saloon to look for young Kraemer, who had escaped. A man rushed in, drew a revolver and declared he was going to shoot Douglas Baker, the prohibition enforcement agent. L. J. Gualdoni, another agent, hit him on the jaw and knocked him down, his revolver flying out of his hand. This man was in a rear room and the door locked, but later it was discovered he had escaped through a back door. Nations said he examined the revolver of all his assistants and that none of them appeared to have been fired.

Nations Grapples With Man.

Earlier in the evening the enforcement agents had gone to the saloon of Joe Jolia, 5256 Patton avenue, and as they approached the bar Jolia threw a bottle at the agents. Several men who had been playing pool in the room ran up with cues in their hands and surrounded the enforcement agent. Nations said he grabbed a man by the throat, bent him backward over the bar, took a revolver from him and threatened to kill him unless the other men backed away. They backed away, Nations released the man and the agents departed without making any arrests.

Still earlier Nations and his squad approached the saloon of William Hannon at 215 North Twelfth street. Howard King, one of the agents, entered and said he purchased half a pint of "moonshine" whiskey from Hannon. Just as he was leaving the telephone rang and Hannon answered it. He said the message caused Hannon to become excited and to lock the door as soon as King was outside. Nations and his squad then demanded admittance, but the door was not opened. Nations called some policemen and when admittance was refused they broke down the door and arrested Hannon.

AIRPLANES OF DRY SQUADRON SEIZE A LIQUOR-LADEN SCHOONER OFF FLORIDA COAST

11,500 Cases of Whisky Aboard British Craft Taken by Agents Working Out of Miami.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 20.—The British schooner Annabelle was seized late Sunday off Jewish Creek about 40 miles south of Miami, with a cargo of 11,500 cases of whisky aboard by airplanes of the prohibition squadron operating out of Miami and adjacent coastal towns. It was learned today from officials here.

The entire crew of 21 men was captured and is now being held under surveillance, while the confiscated liquor is under guard aboard the schooner, which is anchored off Jew Fish. The crew offered no resistance when the flying machines, with their machine guns pointed at the vessel.

Use of Airplanes in War on Rum Runners Told Of in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Use of airplanes along the Florida coast in the war on rum smugglers was told today by prohibition headquarters. Officials would not disclose plans for a liquor escadrille in Florida nor the possible formation of an anti-alcohol navy, mobilized with former subchasers, but the marshalling of the forces in the South is understood to be tentatively decided upon.

Several weeks ago the assignment of a special force of prohibition agents to Florida was announced as the first step in the Southern campaign.

PRESIDENT UNABLE TO GIVE OTHER TREATY DATA

He Writes That No Record Was Kept of Most of Negotiations—"Not Compatible With Public Interest to Disclose Confidential Exchanges."

"NO CONCEALED UNDERSTANDINGS"

Foreign Relations Committee Votes 10 to 1 to Report Favorably the U. S.-Japanese Pact on Island of Yap.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—President Harding, replying today to the Senate on the Hitchcock resolution asking for information relative to the negotiation of the four-Power Pacific treaty, stated it was impossible to furnish the requested information because most of the negotiations were conducted without the maintaining of a record.

The President said it would not be compatible with public interests to disclose the confidential negotiations of the treaty negotiators, but he declared that "there were no concealed understandings and no secret exchanges of notes."

Without discussion the President's letter was referred to the Foreign Relations Committee, when it was read in the Senate, the motion being made by Senator Hitchcock.

Hitchcock's Comment.

After studying the President's reply to his resolution and conferring with Republicans who have criticized the four-power treaty, Senator Hitchcock declared he believed Harding's letter had made it "absolutely necessary" for Secretary Hughes to appear before the committee if it is to act intelligently. Senator Borah, Republican, and other committee members took a similar attitude, although it did not appear whether a motion to summon the Secretary home from his vacation trip to the Bermudas would have a majority.

Senator Hitchcock was preparing to depart for a Western trip when the Harding letter reached the Senate, and he indicated that during his absence Republicans on the committee probably would take up the search for more information about the treaty negotiations. He talked the situation over with Senators Borah and Johnson, Republican, of California, both of whom supported his original request.

Johnson Preparing Speech.

Senator Borah took the position that since no record ever is kept of "secret conferences," of course, the President could not be expected to transmit any information particularly with the former head of the delegation in Bermuda. The Idaho Senator added, however, that the manner in which the treaty was drawn up at meetings of the "big four" undoubtedly "will be debated on the Senate floor when the proper time arrives."

Senator Johnson characterized the President's reply as "most unfortunate" and said he was preparing to make a speech in the Senate intended to show that the executive branch of the Government had taken every precaution to prevent information regarding the treaty negotiations from reaching the Capitol.

"The information regarding the making of the quadruple alliance which we are denied," said the California Senator in a statement, "is necessary to enable the Senate to act intelligently."

The President's reply to the Hitchcock resolution, which was adopted by the Senate last week, follows:

"Responsive to Senate resolution asking for records, minutes, arguments, debates, conversations, etc., relating to the so-called four-power treaty, I have to advise that it is impossible to comply with the Senate's request. Many of the things asked for in the resolution are literally impossible to furnish, because there were many conversations and discussions quite outside the conference, yet vital to its success. Naturally these are without record."

"I do not believe it to be compatible with public interests or consistent with the amenities of international negotiations to attempt to reveal informal and confidential conferences or discussions."

3 MEN IN ENGINE TANK FALL 700 FT. IN SNOW SLIDE

Snow in Tank Acted as Cushion When Locomotive Is Forced Into Canyon—Four Killed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 20.—Two men inside a locomotive tank hurtled 700 feet down the sloping wall of a canyon yesterday while four of their companions, who had remained outside to shovel snow into the tank, were swept to their deaths by a snowslide near Loop, according to a report received here today.

A. S. Kane, engineer, and Thomas Conway, fireman, who were in the tank were taken to their homes in Tabernash, where it is believed they will recover. The bodies of the four shovellers have not been recovered.

The engine had helped an east-bound train over the Continental Divide and was on its return to Tabernash. Eight miles west of Corona, the station on the Continental Divide, the engine's water supply was exhausted as a result of bucking the heavy snows, which required an extraordinary amount of steam. The locomotive was stopped and the four men who were killed got out, while Kane and Conway got inside the water tank to distribute the snow as the four shoveled it in to them. Some time after they had begun work, the slide started. Before they could seek safety, the force of the rush struck them. The four men were hurled into the canyon. The engine was rolled off the track, across the short grade to the precipice and ejected into space over the canyon. The two men, like peas in a pod, rolled about the locomotive, which was hurled into the canyon. HOUSE COMMITTEE PASSES BACK THE BUCK ON BONUS

Republican Members of Ways and Means Put Whole Problem Up to the Subcommittee.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Majority members of the House Ways and Means Committee referred back today to the Special Tax Subcommittee the whole problem of how the soldiers' bonus is to be financed. It was announced that the subcommittee would meet tomorrow and would go into the question of a sales tax among other things.

Opponents of the sales tax began to lay their plans today for a fight against this proposition. Representative Dickinson, Republican, Iowa, a leader of the agricultural bloc, called a meeting of Republican opponents for today.

It was said that, aside from referring the finance question to the subcommittee, the majority members discussed the Fordney bill as originally introduced and approved some slight changes. It is indicated that further action by the majority would await a report from the Tax Subcommittee.

STRAY CURRENT BRINGS IN SHIP SIX HOURS AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

Captain Who Radio Said Would Reach New York at Noon Arrives Before 6 A. M.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The Atlantic Ocean is cutting up queer antics, according to Capt. Karl Graafls, of the Hamburg-American liner Wuernttemberg, which arrived from Hamburg yesterday. Just before reaching the Nantuxet light vessel the captain wirelessed his New York office that his ship would reach quarantine at noon. Instead, he reached here before 6 a. m.

Just after rounding the light vessel the Wuernttemberg ran into a vagrant, uncharted current that carried her along half a knot faster than the captain expected off the Long Island coast. Capt. Graafls, when told there was a rise of more than 40 degrees in the temperature during the last 48 hours, said he thought that might have had something to do with the stray current. He did not think, however, the Gulf Stream could have wandered so far from its course.

HOMICIDE VERDICT IN AUTO FATALITY CASE

Driver Held Testifies John McDonnell Walked Into Rear of Machine.

A Coroner's verdict of homicide, holding John Olson, 30 years old, a chauffeur, of 5374 Theodosia avenue, was returned today in the case of John E. McDonnell, 73, an advertising solicitor, of 3843 Shenandoah avenue, who died at the city hospital Saturday of injuries suffered Wednesday when struck by Olson's automobile at Grand and Shenandoah avenues.

Several witnesses testified that Olson was driving south in the north-bound Grand avenue street car tracks at a rate of 25 miles an hour. They said that McDonnell, who had alighted from a southbound Grand avenue car at Shenandoah, walked around the front end of the car to cross the street and was struck by Olson's car.

Olson testified that he was driving south on the west side of Grand avenue at about 10 miles an hour and that McDonnell walked in front of his machine. In an effort to avoid striking him, he said, he swung his car to the left and McDonnell walked into the rear of his car. Olson was held for the grand jury on a $5000 bond.

CONSOLIDATION OF ST. LOUIS AND NOONDAY CLUBS PROPOSED

It became known today that a proposition for the consolidation of the St. Louis and Noonday Clubs is under consideration. In response to an overture from the St. Louis Club, the Noonday Club appointed a committee, with J. R. Barroll, manager of Butler Bros., as chairman, to meet a committee of the St. Louis Club, of which W. Frank Carter, former president of the Chamber of Commerce, is chairman.

Secretary McCree of the Noonday Club said today that the proposal had not been developed to the point of action on the part of the Noonday Club, other than the appointment of the committee. The proposal, he said, was unaccompanied by details. Members of the clubs assume that the plan contemplates the continuance of both clubs, with the privileges of each open to the members of both.

IRISH ARMY FOOTBALL PLAYERS RELEASED

Viscount Fitzalan Frees Men Whose Arrest Caused Kidnaping of Ulster Constables, Shooting of Four at Clones and Fatal Rioting in Belfast.

COLLINS TO FREE KIDNAPED PERSONS

Considerable Showing by Republican Army Men at De Valera Meeting in Cork—He Says Ireland Is in Great Danger.

BELFAST, Feb. 20.—Members of the Irish Republican army football team, captured at Dromore last month, were released from the Londonderry jail today in conformity with an order issued last night by Viscount Fitzalan, the Viceroy.

A dispatch from Viscount Fitzalan last night, addressed to Sir James Craig, telling of his order for the release of the football players, said that Michael Collins, head of the provisional Government, had promised the release of additional kidnaped persons, these not including the unwounded special constables arrested at Clones. It is believed, however, that Collins has arranged for their release also.

The arrest of the football players caused the kidnaping of several Ulster constables, the killing of four at Clones and rioting in Belfast which cost at least 24 lives.

The border was quiet yesterday and the Liaison Commission will begin operations today.

With the exception of a few minor incidents, the week end in Belfast passed quietly. A man named Hunter, returning from church in the morning, was shot and killed by an armed party in the Springfield road.

Irish Republican Army Men at De Valera Meeting in Cork

CORK, Feb. 20.—A striking feature of the meeting held in Cork yesterday, and at the auspices of Eamon de Valera, was the presence of large numbers of the Irish Republican army from Cork and various parts of the country.

Donald O'Callaghan, Lord Mayor of Cork, presided at the speaker's platform. De Valera proposed the same resolutions as were adopted at his meeting in Dublin last Sunday. He declared that Ireland was in greater danger than it had been at any time in 150 years. The Countess Maclevez and Charles Burgess and other followers of De Valera supported the resolutions.

De Valera's train to Cork was met Saturday at the railway station at Thurles by a crowd carrying Sinn Féin flags. Addressing the people, De Valera said he was glad to see the Republic was not dead in Tipperary.

Arriving in Cork, De Valera was greeted by Lord Mayor O'Callaghan and other prominent republicans. De Valera apologized for not speaking in Gaelic, declaring that he desired every Irish citizen to understand the seriousness of the situation and to fully appreciate what they were doing.

MAN ENDS LIFE IN LEAP FROM FREE BRIDGE INTO RIVER

A man was seen to leap into the Mississippi River from the middle of the Free Bridge shortly before 1 p. m. yesterday. An overcoat, which the man left on the bridge, contained a railroad pass and a union card made out to Thomas Coyle, a bolt cutter for the Terminal Railroad Association, and a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen.

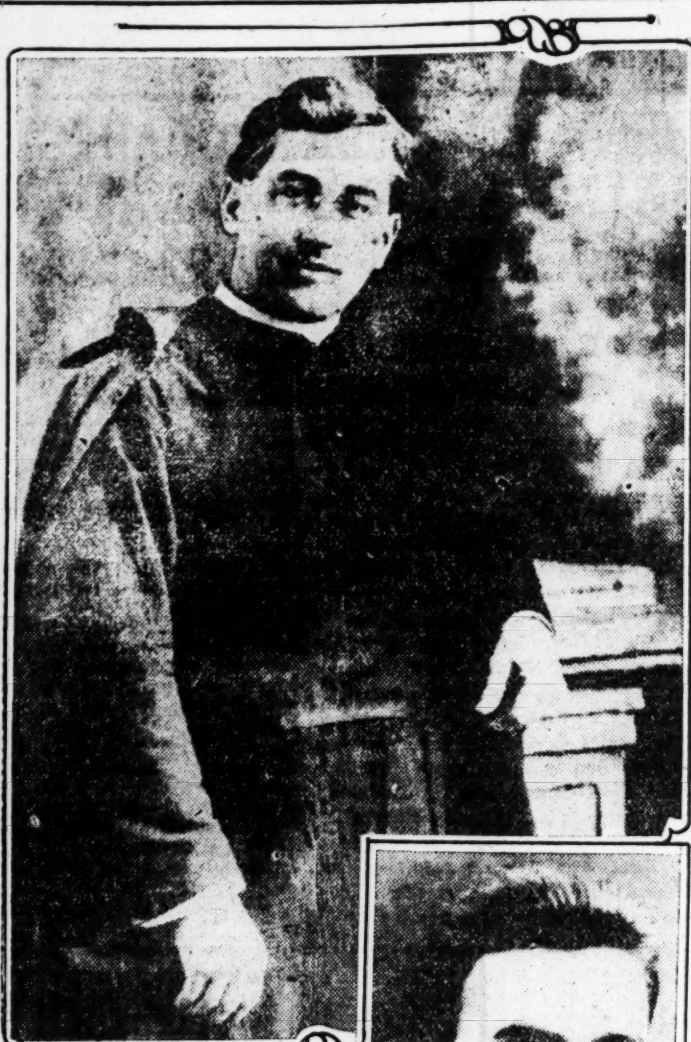

A negro who saw the man jump from the bridge reported the fact to the St. Louis police. At about the same time, two white men, who had also been on the bridge, and had seen the occurrence, took the overcoat to the East St. Louis police station. The negro said the man was wearing a blue coat and a black hat, and that he came up only once after striking the water.

TWO SURRENDERED ON BONDS

The new rule adopted by the Circuit Judges two weeks ago that bondsmen shall not be accepted on bonds to an amount greater than twice their net worth, resulted today in Morris V. Schuchman being rendered on his bond by John Kelly and Charles Troll, and application for surrender of Ray Renard being made by Kelly and Louis Sidell.

Schuchman is charged with embezzlement of $23,462 from the Night and Day Bank, where he was a clerk. His bond was $30,000. Renard is under two $10,000 bonds on two robbery charges. He could not be surrendered because he was arrested Saturday in connection with the East Alton Bank robbery.

town house and the Lake Forest estate to Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick.

Miss Julia Mangold, a Swiss girl, who was formerly Oser's bookkeeper at his riding academy, is Miss McCormick's companion here, and the two have remained in seclusion since their arrival. Yesterday's impromptu tea to the newspaper men was the nearest to public function either had attended. The strong attachment between them, friends of the family say, date from the riding academy days, when Miss McCormick assisted her friend in keeping Oser's accounts.

The romance of the young daughter of John D. Rockefeller was pictured by Emil L. Burgy of Chicago, an interior decorator, as a love of spring and winter.

"Mr. Oser is not three times Miss McCormick's age, as the newspapers have stated," said Burgy, who claims he is a first cousin of the Swiss equestrian. He is older—he is 57 years old, not 48. He is just my age. I am his cousin and I should know."

Friends of the McCormicks said last night McCormick's announcement must have followed consent of Rockefeller. None had definite information, but all stated that even so determined a girl as Miss Matilde has been said to be would not dare go through with such an engagement unless Rockefeller sanctioned it.

That Oser is possessed of noble blood and also has a reasonably large independent income also was stated by Burgy, who believes, however, that the estimate of the riding master's income at $10,000 a year is erroneous.

Son of German Nobleman.

"Max Oser's right name is Max von der Muehl," Burgy said. "His father was a German nobleman, Count von der Muehl. His widowed mother married Sebastian Oser after Sebastian Oser had spent many years in America."

Burgy recounted Sebastian Oser's wanderings in America and said he had got together a sizeable fortune, which he took back to Switzerland, and Burgy hazarded the belief that Max Oser had inherited a considerable portion of it.

BEST-CLYMER FIRM CONSENTS TO RECEIVER

President of Company, However, Does Not Admit That It Is Insolvent.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy, also asking for a receiver, was filed against the Best-Clymer Manufacturing Co. today in the United States District Court.

The petitioning creditors and the amount of indebtedness to each are the Benis Bros. Bag Co., $14,581.45; Huskins & Seils, public accountants, $283.36, and the Mercantile Trust Co., $1,000,000.

The indebtedness of $1,000,000 to the Mercantile Trust Co. was explained by R. King Kauffman, vice president of the trust company, as having originated in a loan of $1,500,000 to the Tentor company. The Tentor company, he said, gave a first mortgage on its Granite City plant and $1,000,000 of Best-Clymer notes as collateral for a loan of $1,500,000, and these notes form the basis of the trust company's claim against Best-Clymer.

It is alleged that the Best-Clymer Co. last Friday, while insolvent, committed an act of bankruptcy by admitting in writing its inability to pay its debts, and that, on Feb. 11 last, the Liberty Industrial Corporation obtained a judgment against the company for $284,174.33 in the Circuit Court, which judgment is a first lien on the company's property, and, if executed, would be a preferred claim.

Service Waiver Signed.

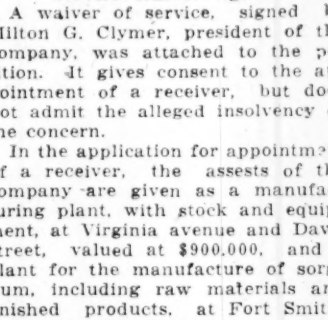

A waiver of service, signed by Milton G. Clymer, president of the company, was attached to the petition. It gives consent to the appointment of a receiver, but does not admit the alleged insolvency of the concern.

In the application for appointment of a receiver, the assets of the company are given as a manufacturing plant, with tools and equipment, at Virginia avenue and Davis street, valued at $900,000, and a plant for the manufacture of sorghum, including raw materials and finished products, at Fort Smith, Ark., valued at $100,000.

William C. Darcy, president of the D'Arcy Advertising Co., is suggested as receiver to take charge of operations and keep the concern going. Darcy took this suggestion under advisement.

On Feb. 10, last, preferred stockholders of the Best-Clymer Co. asked for an injunction against the enforcement of certain contracts existing between the Best-Clymer Co. and the Tentor Corn and Fruit Products Co.

A receiver was also asked for on the ground that the Best-Clymer Co. was hampered and overburdened by the contracts which it was alleged, had not been authorized by the stockholders. It was set forth that the Tentor company was indebted to the Best-Clymer Co. for $2,000,000 of the latter's stock, and that the Tentor company had received $2,000,000 of the Best-Clymer stock from investors in St. Louis.

PORTO RICO COMMISSIONER TO PRESENT CHARGES AGAINST REILY

Felix Cordova Davila to Make Speech in House Tomorrow; Leaders Don't Expect Imprecachment Move.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Felix Cordova Davila, resident Commissioner of Porto Rico, who sits as a delegate in the House without the privilege of voting, announced today that he would present to the House in a speech tomorrow a "series of charges" against Gov. E. Mont Reily of Porto Rico.

Some of the charges, Davila said, related to official acts of Gov. Reily. The Commissioner is a member of the Unionist party, which opposed Reily.

Concerning reports that representatives of the Unionists might ask, through Davila, for impeachment proceedings against the Governor, leaders expressed doubt as to whether such step would be possible under the rules of the House. They said that the Commissioner could introduce a resolution calling for an investigation, but expressed some doubt as to its adoption.

TRUTH WEEK TO BE OBSERVED BY BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

About 40 Members of National Organization Here for Four-Day Convention.

Truth Week will be observed in St. Louis by meetings tomorrow, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of the National Better Business Bureau, which is the parent of the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis. About 40 members of the national organization are here for the convention. H. A. Kenner of New York is director of its activities.

There will be two open meetings, one at luncheon tomorrow at Hotel Statler, where Melville L. Wilkison, a director of the Associated Retailers, will speak, and the other Thursday evening, when the Advertising Club of St. Louis will be hosts to the visitors at dinner at the same hotel.

The work of the Better Business Bureau in St. Louis has resulted in the exposure of many frauds in the last few years and has promoted a closer adherence generally to truth in advertising.

DIVORCE REFUSED TO MAN WHO DISLIKED HOME TAILORING

Suit of William C. Swift Against Wife Is Dismissed by Judge Calhoun.

Judge Calhoun, in the Court of Domestic Relations, today decided that William C. Swift, 51 years old, proprietor of the Swift Sheet Metal Co., 3305 Finney avenue, had not sufficiently proven his charge that his wife Mrs. Ella Pauline Swift, had altered his clothing to make him look like a young man in fashionable models, without his consent, and otherwise annoyed him. The Judge, therefore, dismissed Swift's suit for divorce.

Swift had alleged that his wife made him wear pinchback suits and in general resemble a "rah rah boy," but she said he used to tell her to alter his clothes that way. She said she made him move 25 times since they were married in 1917, but she said the amount of rest or trouble with the houses made that necessary. He testified she gave him carbolic acid for medicine and made him lose 50 pounds as a result, but she said she got the acid by mistake for Jamaica ginger, and the Judge agreed such a mistake was possible.

The court held that Swift, who lives at the Colonial Hotel, 509 North Grand avenue, had not proven any of his charges. His wife lives at 4001 Washington boulevard. Swift was divorced from a former wife in 1905.

RAY'S OF LIGHT CONVERTED INTO MUSICAL SOUNDS

Permit Blind to Read "Optophone," Invented by Prof. E. E. Fournier D'Albe, Demonstrated by Sightless Women—Transformation Through Selenium Cells.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Rays of light converted into musical sounds of exquisite harmony are the medium by which persons totally blind may now read newspapers and any ordinary book. This was demonstrated yesterday in the offices of the Federated Engineers Development Corporation, Jersey City, when Miss Margaret Hogan, blind, read a story in a newspaper.

The demonstration was accomplished by means of a device known as the "optophone." The inventor is Prof. E. E. Fournier D'Albe, B. S., formerly lecturer on physics at the University of Birmingham, England, whose original experiments, brought before the London Optical Convention in 1912, aroused wide scientific interest.

Ten years have brought about the development of the idea to its present amazing proportions.

In the optophone of today light projected by a tiny photograph lens streams through five rows of oblong perforations in a revolving disk and is reflected back and transformed into sound by means of selenium cells.

Like Musical Staff.

To the untechnical observer these rays of light appear to correspond to the five parallel bars of a musical staff, producing, as they pass over each letter, five notes of the musical scale, as follows: Sol, do, re, mi, and sol again on a high key.

By way of illustration, the electric carriage bears the tiny shaft of light, with its five parallel bars, slowly along under the row of printed letters on the down-turned page in a curved letter, "C," for example, the outer curve first comes in contact with the light and the line or space which corresponds to vocal syllable "re." Then as the light proceeds over the letter the vibrates produce sounds to "do" and "mi" simultaneously. In the letter "m," the high syllable sounds first as the upper part of the letter comes in contact with the light; then the full five-note chord as the light reaches the upright part of the letter, only to revert again to the high tone. The combined effect is charming to the ear of the reader. It is unheard by everyone else.

How Notes Are Produced.

Selenium, it was explained by those who have been testing the optophone, has the peculiar property of offering a high resistance to the passage of electricity, which resistance is broken down to a marked degree when light shines upon it. It is sometimes called "the electrical eye" because it is affected by light. The musical notes of the optophone are produced, therefore, as the printed letter passes between the selenium and the light. In capital letters, the notes are of greater intensity than when the type is small.

So delicate is the registration made by the optophone that even the small type known as "seven point" (the size used here) can be read by the blind operator. A change in the speed of rotation of the disk, of course, alters the pitch of the notes—that is, the key in which the notes are sounded—but the intervals remain the same. The length of scale of five spots of light may be adjusted to equal the height of the letters to be read.

Blind Woman Reads.

That the problem was solved successfully was evidenced yesterday when a reporter of the Post-Dispatch entered a room on the fifth floor of the building occupied by the corporation.

A woman sat at a table. On a small mechanical contrivance before her a book rested, upside down. The woman's ears were covered by telephone receivers. She seemed to be listening. Apparently the sounds she heard were pleasant. She smiled. She partly turned her head and reached forth a welcoming hand.

"I always was interested to know how the Indians built their birch-bark canoes," she explained. "I am just reading about it."

Then she unstopped the book from the glass cover on which it rested and handed it to her visitor. The volume was an ordinary library copy of Lawton R. Evans' book, "America First." The woman was Miss Margaret Rosalind Hogan, B. A., the first blind woman to graduate from Columbia University, class of 1911, for two years tutor in Latin and mathematics at Wadleigh High School and for the last seven years connected with the New Jersey Commission for the Blind as teacher.

When T. Irving Potter, president of the Federated Engineers Development Corporation, suggested that a competent blind person be obtained to examine the optophone and give an opinion, as well as a practical test of its possibilities, Miss Hogan was mentioned as especially qualified.

Story of What She Heard.

From her home in Orange, Miss Hogan made her first visit to the corporation's office last September. She ran her fingers lightly over the mechanism of the electrical contrivance, but she was told it would be necessary for her to learn to operate. Then she adjusted the headpiece, such as is worn by telephone operators, and listened. What she heard is best told in her own words:

"It was a tiny little tinkle, so soft I could barely distinguish it at first. It was sweet and musical. As I listened I noticed a difference in the sounds. It was like a scale and then a chord of fairy music. What I was hearing was the alphabet. But I could not distinguish between the sounds. I am not naturally musical. I am not considered to have a good ear for music. Even my knowledge of music is slight. My knowledge and aptitude for mechanical devices and electricity are even less. When I touched the machine and its various appliances I must admit I felt some discouragement. I said I would be able to master the different sounds. Then, almost as I came to that decision, I realized that I was distinguishing the letter 'A' every time I heard it."

Can Read 15 Words a Minute.

"From that moment I became enthusiastic. There was no one to help me. I just sat down alone and listened while the fairy-like orchestra sang again and again the letters of the alphabet into my willing ears. Then I tried a paragraph in a book. I tried to know whether or not I was reading the paragraph correctly. I read very slowly and wrote each word on my Braille typewriter. Then I would take the book to the laboratory and ask someone to read the paragraph to me from the book, while I compared it with my Braille notes."

"Naturally, like any beginner, I made mistakes. I have had to be patient and wait to acquire speed and accuracy. I can now read 15 words a minute. I believe that any child taught to read in this manner with the same degree of care that is given in teaching a seeing child to read will be able to develop equal proficiency. I only regret that I did not have such a machine when I was taking my college course."

Literature Opened to Blind.

"The invention of the optophone now opens up to the sightless the whole vast world of literature. They will be able to select their books with the same discrimination as seeing people and not be dependent upon a committee which decides what books are suitable for the blind and what are not."

"By means of the optophone," Miss Hogan said, "blind people will be able to read all literature. It will make education of the blind much easier. If the schools will take it up and use the same degree of patience in instruction as is done in finger tip reading, pupils will be able to learn just as fast."

Plans are being made by President Potter and other members of the Engineers Corporation to overcome some of the disadvantages which still remain in using the optophone. One of these is the necessary removal of a book from the stand every time a page is turned. A width regulation adjusted to newspaper columns and other varying space has been added. The music is produced by five light rays each at a different section.

SENATORS DENY REPORT OF PLANS TO HELP REED

Declare They Have No Intention of Interfering in Missouri Primaries.

From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch, 20 Wyatt Building, WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—A report published in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch yesterday to the effect that several pro-league Senators had met and agreed to support Senator Reed in the Democratic primary against Breckinridge Long was emphatically denied this morning by three of the four Senators named in the story.

Senator Overman said that, though he admired Reed as a gentleman and a fighter and hoped that he would continue as a member of the Senate, he had no intention of taking any part in the Missouri primary. He said he had never heard of any conference of pro-league Senators in Reed's behalf.

Senator Hitchcock also denied that he had participated in or approved of any such conference. "I can hardly conceive," he said, "of Senators taking sides in a primary. After the nomination is made it will, of course, be different. I have troubles enough of my own in Nebraska without going into Missouri."

Senator Simmons said that he had taken part in no conference of the sort and so far as he knew none had been held. Senator Stanley, the fourth Senator named in the article, could not be reached this morning.

The story of the alleged conference grew out of a remark dropped by Senator Stanley that he had read, despite the Missouri's antileague views, and that some other pro-league Senators felt the same way about it, and would like to see Reed come back. Stanley was asked what Senators he had in mind and named Simmons, Overman and Hitchcock. Stanley's remark was passed from mouth to mouth and it was not until it had grown into the story of a conference.

Senator Reed, back in the Senate today after his trip to sound out political sentiment in Missouri, declined to say whether he had decided to be a candidate for re-election. It is generally believed among Reed's friends here that he will run.

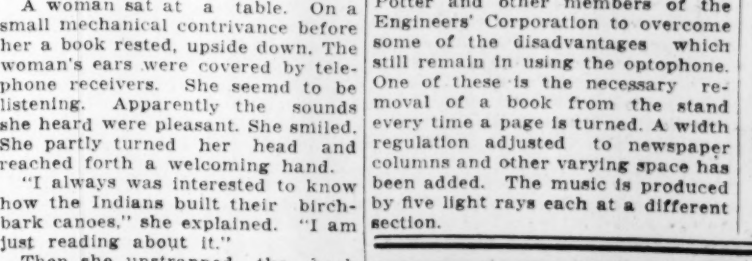

Duck Hunter Is Arrested

Four wild ducks were found in the bottom of a grip carried by a man who was arrested when he stepped from a train at St. Charles yesterday afternoon by United States Game Warden Harry Barmeter. The man said he was Harry Kaiser of 4018 St. Louis avenue. He was returning from a hunting club on the Missouri River. The prisoner, after a hearing today on a charge of having wrecked in his possession in the closed season, was bound over to the Federal grand jury under $500 bond.

A WHET OF OYSTERS

Hygeia, the classical goddess of health, gave the ancients many rules for good living. Those who abided by these rules began dinner with a whet of plump, medium-sized oysters, And ate them slowly in order that their exquisite flavor might be fully enjoyed. The mythical Hygeia may be forgotten, but many still follow her rule at CHILDS.

An oyster stew, as made at CHILDS, is a delicious health food.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Five citizens of the United States reported an aggregate gross revenue in 1919 of $65,090,572, according to a report of the Treasury Department.
Deductions of $14,465,673 were allowed, bringing the net income to $50,624,899, on which the Government collected $33,301,085, or 65.77 per cent.

The analysis of the income of these five taxpayers made by the department, showed that less than $15,000 came from wages and salaries, none from "business," $20,000 from partnerships and personal service corporations, $11,000,000
from sale of real estate, stocks, bonds, etc., $121,000 from rents and royalties, $46,000,000 from dividends, $6-713,000 from interest and investment income, and the balance from interest on Government securities, not exempt from taxation.

Taxable incomes of individuals returned to the Government for the calendar year 1919 showed an increase of nearly $4,000,000,000 as compared with 1918, according to statistics issued by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

More Than Five Million Returns.
For 1919 there were 5,332,760 individual returns filed for a total income of $19,859,000,000, as against 4,425,114 returns for $15,824,000,000 the previous year. The tax collected on the 1919 returns amounted to $1,270,000,000, an increase of $141-988,000 over 1918.

Personal returns of incomes of $1,000,000 and over totaled 65 for 1919 compared with 67 in 1918.
While for 1919 there were five returns filed for incomes of $5,000,000 and over.

For 1919 there were six personal returns of income from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000; seven of $2,000,000 to $3,000,000; 13 from $1,500,000 to
$2,000,000; 34 from $1,000,000 to
$1,500,000; 69 from $750,000 to
$1,000,000; and 140 from $400,000 to $750,000.

The average net income reported for 1919 was $2,724.05, the average amount of tax $238.08, and the average tax 8.39 per cent. The proportion of the population of the country filing returns for the year was 5.93 per cent reporting a per centage of net income of $1,755.06,
and a per capita income tax of $11.88.

Corporation Returns Increase.
The number of corporation income tax returns, other than personal service corporations for 1919, was 320,198, of which 209,634 reported net income amounting to $9,411,000-000, with a total tax of $1,755,060-000, compared with the 1918 figures of 317,579 corporations filing returns, of which 202,061 reported a total net income of $8,361,000,000 and a tax aggregating $1,158,000-000.

Partnerships filing returns for 1919 totaled 175,898, and the number of personal service corporations

W. L. George Says There Are Times When Women Should Be Made to Pay Alimony

English Author of Popular Novels Who Is in St. Louis for Lecture

Novelist Impatient With People Who Can't Understand Why Girls Should Like Kissing and Dancing.

STRONG IN DEFENSE
OF AMERICAN WOMEN

What He Thinks of Mrs. Asquith's Statement That the Men Are Superior Is Un-printable, He Says.

W. L. George, an English novelist of wide reputation who makes a specialty of feminine character, gave some of his opinions about women—including the conditions under which they should be compelled to pay alimony—in a talk with a Post-Dispatch reporter at Hotel Statler last night. He is here to lecture tonight at Temple Shaare Emeth, Lindell boulevard and Vandeventer avenue, on the subject, "Love and Marriage."

This little man of 40, with thin hair, prominent eyes and a pince-nez, who is credited by many with knowing a vast deal about what goes on under a $5-to-$5000 hat, puffed rapidly at his pipe, which he occasionally filled from an enormous pouch, and remarked on his impiousness with people who can't understand why a girl should like kissing, dancing and chocolates. "I should think," he said, "that it would be most natural for the young thing to want them." And on the whole, his attitude toward women and girls is distinctly sympathetic.

When Women Should Pay Alimony.
But he does think there is a time when a woman should pay alimony —more than one time, in fact. For example, if a man who has nothing divorces a wife who is wealthy, and obtains custody of their children, the woman should be made to contribute to the children's support, he thought.

Again, if a man and woman of equal earning power are married, and the man falls ill and is deserted by his wife, she should be compelled to pay him alimony until he recovers his ability to support himself, said George.

"On the whole, women have a balance of the disagreeable things, however," he said. "In America, a man's wife is invariably defeated by his business, if he is at all successful.
Woman is an incident to the average American business man. His career's the main thing. There is a positive lust for business in this country. In these office buildings at night I see not a few managers, but the clerks (pronounced clarks), working to all hours." No, he didn't think these were cases of men who wanted to escape from home. These probably were a few like that, but they were exceptional.

Change in Woman's Position.
"There has been a complete change in the woman's position in the last 100 years," he continued.
"If a man's wife failed to obey him 150 years ago, he would have been beaten. But he didn't expect his wife to be an intellectual companion, as he does now." Did George mean by this that if the modern wife failed to obey the bill of intellectual companion, her husband had the right to beat her?

"Oh, no! You don't catch me like that," he said. "I didn't justify the beating in the first instance. The wife's five with a wife is not to dominate but to manage her. There's a lot of compromise in it—a lot of fact, you know."

He went on more generally: "After all, life isn't such a desperately significant thing. It won't do to take it too seriously. That sounds like Schopenhauer, I guess I am somewhat Schopenhauerian, too, except that he was a German, and went about gnashing his teeth, while my training was French, so that I rather go about giggling. But life isn't contemptible, as he said. It's worth making the best we can of it—just."

George is very fond of America.
He says he is coming here every year. What did he think of Mrs. Asquith's statement that American men are superior to American women?
What he thought about it was not printable, then he said: "Well, I'll just say this: When she said that, she was stupid."

"First Duty Is to One's Self."
"And by the way, there is a lot of rot talked about doing what is best for the world. Damn the world!

best for the world. Damn the world!

best for the world. Damn the world!

best for the world. Damn the world!

best for the world. Damn the world!

best for the world. Damn the world!

W. L. GEORGE.

The first duty of every human is to himself. The best thing you can do for the world is to make a better human of yourself. And by better I mean more truthful, more willing to face the truth, and more willing to face the consequences of your actions. If we all do that, the world will take care of itself.

"We'd as well get rid of this silly old idea of trying to live by rules.
Rules don't take circumstances into account. There's many a man and woman who aren't very decent, but who are just as decent as they can be."

Returning to the woman question, he said he wondered if Ibsen wasn't at the bottom of all the incredible liberty which women had won in the last half-century. Next in influence he placed Bernard Shaw, "who, while not always a feminist, has the woman's viewpoint, and demands decent privileges for her." Shaw's great influence resulted, he said, from the fact that "Shaw made stimulus easy for the young mind to absorb, because he is so astoundingly entertaining."

The most important thing that had happened to the world of women since Nora Helmer, in "A Doll's House," slammed the door and went out to find herself, was when Christabel Pankhurst and Annie Kenney, in 1905, got up in a public meeting and asked a British Cabinet Minister when the Government intended to give votes to women. He believed.

"Woman Not the Pursuer."
George doesn't agree with the idea of his friend, H. L. Mencken, the American critic, that woman is always the pursuer and man the pursued. "Mencken is talking about women 25 years old or over," he said. "Perhaps the rule is fairly good above that age. But the girl of less than 25 is not usually the pursuer, and under 25 rarely is.
There's something in Mencken's idea, but he maintains it too rigidly."

George makes it a rule not to talk politics, but he doesn't think that revolution is anywhere near in America. "Of course," he added, up in paroxysms, "Lord Milner said that of Russia a week before the revolution, but then we know that the people were mixing dirt with their bread.
Revolution wouldn't succeed here. It would be crushed with the most insane violence."

This is George's second visit to St.
Louis. He was here for two days in September, 1920. He likes it, he said, not so well as Chicago, where, says he, "the noise is simply Wagnerian."

RAID ON FLAT EFFECTED BY USE OF TRANSOM

Blind Man and Five Women Arrested When Alleged Liquor Is Discovered.

After trying for an hour and 15 minutes to get the occupants of a second-floor flat at 3414 North Whittier street to admit them, one member of a squad of four detectives under the command of Night Chief of Police Rundle entered through a transom at 1:30 a. m. yesterday and opened the front door from the inside. They arrested a blind man who said he was Louis Lamont, 47 years old; a woman who said she was Mrs.
Bernice Lamont, 35, his wife; a negress, who was found in bed fully clothed, and three young women, who were found scantily clad, locked in a closet on the third floor.

In the kitchen the officers found a quart bottle partly filled with what they said was whisky, and on the back porch four bottles of homemade beer.

Watchman Is Suspended.
The same squad of officers arrested William Koehler, 38, a licensed private watchman, at his home, 17 South Spring avenue, after one of their number reported that he had found Koehler willing to sell a pint of whisky for $1.75 and a bottle of home-made beer for 25 cents. In his home the policemen reported they found 135 bottles of homemade beer and four quarts and two pints of supposed whisky. Koehler was suspended as a licensed watchman.

John J. Hanley, proprietor of a saloon, was arrested at his home, 3709 Finney avenue, at 1 a. m., by policemen who found three other men there with him. The officers found 135 bottles of homemade beer and four quarts and two pints of supposed whisky. Koehler was suspended as a licensed watch-
man.

Summation to the Door.
Summation to the door from a ring, no servant being in the house,
Mrs. Robertson left her guests.
Mrs. Robertson found herself facing at the door a big man, who wore a white mask. He presented a pistol close to her body as she snatched the sunburst from her dress, told her to turn and walk into the house and followed her with the pistol at her back.

Whisky in Man's Pocket.
A man who said he was Steve Paunkitz, 41, of 1825 South Eleventh street, was arrested at 3 a. m. yesterday in front of 3123 South Second Broadway by a policeman who said he saw him pouring liquor from a bottle into a glass while another man stood beside him. The second man escaped. The policeman said he found a pint bottle partly filled with whisky in Paunkitz's hip pocket.

A man who fell out of a buggy at Main and Gasconade street at 11 o'clock Saturday night, was arrested and taken to the city hospital where he was said to be suffering from alcoholism. He said he was John Pav-lasech of 1123 South Second street.

A "half" pint bottle of liquor was found under the buggy seat.

Policemen who heard a woman screaming at 4 a. m. entered a flat at 214 North Sarah street and arrested a woman who said she was Mrs. Clara List, residing there. They took her to the city hospital, where it was said she was suffering from acute alcoholism. A pint bottle of whisky was found on a table in the flat.

Negroes Found Drunk.
George McCormick, proprietor of a saloon at 2 South Twenty-second street, was arrested at 1 a. m. after policemen found two negroes in a wash room drinking whisky from a bottle they said they had bought from McCormick for 50 cents.

Others arrested on liquor charges were James Bolone, proprietor of a saloon at 2758 Market street; William J. Hannan, proprietor of a saloon at 215 North Twelfth street, and Joseph Wedel, proprietor of a saloon at 1827 South Fourteenth street.

FEDERAL AID FOR AMERICAN SHIPPING URGED BY SPEAKER

Edward C. Plummer, Commissioner of the United States Shipping Board, spoke this afternoon before the Foreign Trade Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce and the industrial traffic managers, on the subject of the shipping problem of the United States.

Plummer urged that the Government should aid private interests in operating the Government's fleet of merchant ships, now largely idle, for the purpose of building up a working American merchant marine. He said foreign shipping interests, and the American representatives of these interests, were furnishing the chief obstacles to the carrying out of such a plan.

In the past, he said, the United States Government has followed the policy of protecting American industries against foreign competition, but has given practically no protection to its shipping industry, "which needs and is entitled to protection more than any other." This country has the "shipping brains," he declares, but those brains have been used to develop foreign shipping interests.

THEODORE MARBURG JR. SHOOT HIMSELF

Son of Former Minister to Belgium in Serious Condition After Accident in Mexico.

By the Associated Press.

NOGALES, Ariz., Feb. 20.—Little hope for the recovery of Theodore Marburg Jr., who accidentally shot himself at Magdalena, Sonora, Friday, is held by attending physicians, according to word received yesterday by American Consul A. B. Dyer at Nogales, Sonora, opposite here.

Marburg, son of a wealthy Baltimore resident and former United States Minister to Belgium, had retired to rooms over the Marburg, Kibbey Cattle Co. offices in Magdalena, when the accident occurred, according to the version wired to American Consul Dyer. The revolver slipped from his hands, accidentally discharging when it struck the floor, the informant said.

Marburg was a World War aviator in France. Only recently he married a Baltimore girl. The couple completed their honeymoon a few weeks ago when the bride turned to Baltimore and Marburg went to Magdalena. Mrs. Marburg was to join him there in the spring, his friends said.

Mrs. W. B. Kibbey, wife of Marburg's business partner, passed through Nogales yesterday on her way to Tucson where she will meet the father, who left Baltimore for Magdalena, on receipt of information that his son had been shot.

Marburg's parents were in St. Louis four hours last night on their way to Mexico. They also said they had been informed there was little hope for his recovery.

Graham, will go to the penitentiary within a few days to begin serving the five-year sentence imposed on him by a jury in Judge McElhinney's court at Clayton Saturday night. This became known today, when the Judge passed formal sentence on Taylor.

Charles Noble, Taylor's lawyer, waived the right to file a motion for a new trial, and said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that there would be no appeal to the Supreme Court.

FRISCO DISCUSSES REPAIR WORK PLANS WITH UNION

Workers Protest Establishment of Piece-Work Basis in Springfield (Mo.) Shops.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Feb. 20.—Representatives of the Federated Shop Crafts of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Co. are in secret conference here today with company officials over a controversy which followed the company's proposal to conduct car repair work on a piece basis.

Before the opening of the conference, H. L. Worman, superintendent of motive power, stated that, in the event the proposal for piece work was rejected by the unions, the Springfield car shops would be leased to outside contractors, who would continue the work on a piece scale. A number of contractors have submitted bids, according to Mr. Worman.

Union officials today admitted that large numbers of shop workers had voluntarily signed a petition requesting that the former system of piece work be adopted. About 4000 men are involved.

"He is Going to College"

"It has always been my ambition to send my boy to college."

"With that thought in mind, I started a special savings account, as trustee for him, on his ninth birthday."

"Every month, out of my allowance for household expenses, I put something in that account, even if it is only one dollar, and make it a sacred duty never to touch a penny of it. I always try to get my deposit in before the fifth of the month, so as to get all the interest possible."

"My son is fifteen now, and I have saved up a little more than $300. He is going to college."

LA FOLLETTE ASSAILS THE ARMS CONFERENCE

Senator Says U. S. Becoming Western Empire, Mixing in All World's Intrigues.

By the Associated Press.
MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 20.—The "twin pillars" of the American nation—freedom and independence—are today being battered down "by the vandals of privilege and monopoly, who have secured control of every branch of government, and are using its great powers, both in domestic and foreign policy, to protect and extend their enormous wealth," Senator Robert M. La Follette declared here yesterday afternoon in an address at a meeting in commemoration of Gen. Frederick von Steuben, the revolutionary leader.

La Follette condemned the Washington conference, whose object he declared was "to make the world safe for imperialism." He attacked the Harding administration for what he said was its attempt to enroach upon the congressional prerogatives, hampering the agricultural bloc and attempting to thwart passage of the soldier bonus bill.

"The people of the nations must determine," Senator La Follette declared, "whether they will return to the fundamental principles upon which their Government was established and devote their lives and energies to building up a great people, or whether they will follow the path along which Woodrow Wilson and Warren G. Harding have attempted to lead them of becoming a great Western empire, a party to the world's intrigues, hated by all people and respected by no one."

MOTHER SUPPORTS WOMAN'S CLAIM ON EGAN ESTATE

Mrs. Anna Crane on Stand in Behalf of Daughter Who Is Asking for Allowance.

Mrs. Anna Crane of 4438 Lee avenue testified today in the Probate Court, in support of the claim of her daughter, Margaret, for a widow's share in the $255,000 estate of William T. Egan, Constable and Democratic city committeeman, who was murdered by gangsters Oct. 31 last. The daughter, who gives her name as Margaret Crane Egan, is asking at present for an allowance, under an old statute, providing that a widow may make such a claim if she has "no grain" in the house. She declares, in her petition, that she has no grain, meat, vegetables, groceries or other provisions. The granting of an allowance would serve to establish her claim to a widow's share, one-half the estate. Her claim is being resisted by Egan's relatives.

Mrs. Anna Crane testified that on July 14, 1918, Egan and her daughter came to the home of Egan carrying a suitcase, and that Egan said: "This is my wife, and we are going to live at the Holland Hotel until next November." They remained at the hotel after that time, however, the mother said, until the time of Egan's death. Mrs. Crane said she often visited them at the hotel, and that they went to her house, and that Egan was sick in her home twice, at one time for two months and was nursed by Margaret. They traveled to Chicago and elsewhere together, she said. She said Egan was "close-mouthed" and of "a secluded disposition."

On cross-examination Mrs. Crane said that her daughter was married to Henry J. Ervick at St. Charles in July, 1917, and was divorced from him in St. Louis June 24, 1918. Mrs. Crane and her daughter were formerly employed in a garment factory, and the daughter was secretary of the Garment Workers' Union at one time.

SAYS CASH REGISTER PLANT BANS ONLY EXTREMES IN DRESS

President of Company Asserts Girl Employees Are Not Forbidden to Wear Hair Bobbed.

Girls in his employ can bob their hair or leave it alone, provided they do not go to extremes in dress, Frederick B. Patterson, 28 years old, recently elected president of the National Cash Register Co. of Dayton, O., declared today in commenting on an Associated Press dispatch from Dayton published yesterday's Post-Dispatch, stating that the company had requested its 1000 young women employees to refrain from bobbing their hair and wearing short skirts, silk stockings and peek-a-boos.

None of these things was banned entirely, Patterson said. "We simply want to prevent, because of any possible feeling of envy or embarrassment, a marked difference in dress between the girls who need most of their wages to help support their families and those free to spend the money entirely on themselves."

killing contractors was approved, and the association urged the establishment of a municipal sprinkling service.

LEAGUE PLANNING BETTER PUBLICITY

Council Says That Washington Conference Set Good Example With Open Sessions.

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Plans for better publicity are under consideration by the League of Nations. The league's news bureau today received from Geneva a communique from the league council embodying a memorandum regarding publicity prepared by Wilson Harris, London newspaper man and president of the International Association of Journalists, accredited to the League of Nations.

"It is necessary," said the memorandum, "that the league should persistently cultivate what may be termed both active and passive publicity; by passive publicity being understood the mere elimination of secrecy, and by active publicity the taking of definite measures to secure the world-wide dissemination of information of importance."

"It is of the highest importance," the memorandum continued, "that the league council should sit habitually in public and only exceptionally in private."

In recommending the "elimination of secrecy," the memorandum says: "It has to be remembered that what interests the public is active controversy, not merely a dry exposition of divergences of view, but the sharp unstudied expressions of differences of opinion. Consequently, sessions of the council, if reports of them are to engage popular interest, must avoid the appearance of having been staged, and must be public even where there is risk of the unexpected. It is the unexpected that stimulates public interest."

The memorandum urged that, in the case of private sessions, full and lucid communications should be issued, adding that those of the committee of the recent Washington conference were good examples.

ST. LOUIS SCHOOL TAX RATE AMONG LOWEST IN LARGE CITIES

Continuation of Levy of 55 Cents on $100 Valuation Will Be Voted.

On March 28, Information in the hands of the Board of Education indicates that St. Louis has one of the lowest school tax rates of those of the larger cities. The rate here is 55 cents on the $100 and an effort will be made to have this continued for four years at a special election, March 28. Pittsburgh has the same rate, but will increase to $1.15 soon. The Philadelphia and Kansas City rate is 55 cents; that of Los Angeles, $1.40; Denver, $1.17; Chicago, $2.75, but this is based on 50-per-cent property valuation, so that the rate is equivalent to $1.37.

Unless the voters approve the proposal for an 85-cent rate next month St. Louis will revert to the basic rate of 80 cents, which, officials say, would be calamitous. School teachers have been asked to spread information about the need for voting.

the tax and principals discussed the matter at a recent meeting. Representatives of organizations of all sorts and other citizens are to discuss a campaign for the tax at a mass meeting at Central High School, Grand avenue and Windsor place, at 8 o'clock this evening.

HINTS ON CORPORATION INCOME TAX RETURNS

Collector Moore Issues Explanation of Conditions Prescribed by Act of 1921.

"Hints" for corporations filing income tax returns for the year 1921 were issued today by the Internal Revenue Department, through Collector Moore, as follows:
 "Forms 1120 for reporting net income of corporations for 1921 now are available at the offices of collectors of internal revenue and deputy collectors."

"The Federal tax on income of corporations is divided into two parts, income tax and excess profits tax. The income tax on corporations for 1921 is at the rate of 10 per cent of the net income subject to tax. For 1922 and subsequent years, as provided by the revenue act of 1921, the income tax is 15 per cent."

"In ascertaining net income subject to the income (normal) tax, the corporation is allowed certain specific credits, which include (1) the amount of war and excess profits tax imposed by the United States for the same taxable year, and (2) interest received upon obligations of the United States and bonds of the War Finance Corporation which has been included in gross income. A specific credit of $2000 is also allowed corporations whose net income for 1921 was $25,000 or less. Under the revenue act of 1918, this exemption was allowed all corporations regardless of the amount of net income. The act provides that if the net income is more than $25,000, the normal tax shall not exceed the tax which would be payable if the $2000 credit was allowed, plus the amount of the net income in excess of $25,000."

Excess Profits Tax.
 "The excess profits tax is computed on the basis of the relation of net income to the invested capital of the corporation, as defined by section 326 of the revenue act of 1921. This tax is in addition to the normal income tax of 10 per cent. It is based on the net income above a specific exemption of $5000 and 8 per cent of the invested capital for the taxable year, these amounts being known as excess profits credits. The rates are the same as for 1920. 20 per cent of the net income in excess of the excess profits credits and not in excess of 20 per cent of the invested capital of the taxable year (known as first bracket) and 40 per cent of the net income in excess of 20 per cent of the invested capital (second bracket). Invested capital for the taxable year is the capital actually paid in for stock outstanding, including the paid-in surplus and earned surplus or profits earned prior to the taxable year, which have not been distributed. The term "invested capital" does not include borrowed capital."

"Invested capital" embraces two classes of assets; those known as "admissible assets" and those known as "inadmissible assets." Admissible assets are those which produce income that is subject to income tax. Inadmissible assets are those (other than obligations of the United States) which produce income that is exempt from income taxation. For example, cash, real estate, bills receivable and other tangible assets, which produce income that is subject to the income tax are admissible assets. Assets such as stocks and State or municipal bonds which produce income that is exempt from income tax are inadmissible assets."

Invested Capital Deductions.
 "The revenue act of 1921 requires that all corporations having inadmissible assets must deduct from invested capital 'a percentage thereof equal to the percentage which the amount of inadmissible assets is of the total amount of admissible and inadmissible assets held during the taxable year.' For example, the total assets of a corporation for 1921 were $200,000, of which $150,000 was in inadmissible assets and $50,000 in admissible assets. The average invested capital was $80,000. Applying the above rule, the invested capital must be reduced by 75 per cent (the percentage of the inadmissible assets, $150,000, to the total assets, $200,000). The reduced invested capital, therefore, will be $20,000 (the invested capital), less $40,000 (75 per cent of the invested capital), or $20,000. Where a corporation's income is reported on a cash receipts and disbursements basis, accrued items cannot be taken into consideration in computing its invested capital."

"The payment of a stock dividend has no effect upon the amount of invested capital. The capitalization of current earnings does not increase the invested capital. Appreciation in good will and tangible property determined by an appraisal against which a stock dividend was issued cannot be allowed as invested capital. The value of tangible property paid in for stock or shares in an amount as limited by section 326 of the revenue act of 1921 may be included in invested capital."

"The revenue act of 1921 provides that every corporation, joint stock company, association and insurance company, not specifically exempt shall file a return. THREE MEN RACE 10 MILES WITH ICE CRACKING AT HEELS

Michigan Fisherman Saved by Skaters; Others Forced to Swim Ashore.

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich., Feb. 20.—Three Traverse City fishermen yesterday raced with death across 10 miles of breaking ice in Grand Traverse Bay and won by a narrow margin. The men, Louis Coleman, Arthur Rinart and Frank Hoard, were marooned on Henry Ford's island for several hours after their dash and were rescued by Lester and Archie Bucham, farmers, who skated across rotting ice, drawing a rowboat behind them.

The three men, with a score of other fishermen, were on the ice in the bay when a southerly wind sprang up, causing the ice to crumble rapidly. Many of the men were forced to swim ashore.

Coleman, Rinart and Hoard, the farthest out, found their escape cut off from the mainland. Discarding top-boots, coats and fishing tackle, they raced north with the ice giving way steadily under foot. They were exhausted when they reached the island.

REVERSAL OF ZONING VERDICT TO BE SOUGHT FOR BY CITY

Mayor Kiel Instructs Caulfield to Use All Legal Means to This End.

Mayor Kiel today instructed City Counselor Caulfield to use every possible legal means to gain a reversal of the decision of the State Supreme Court, handed down Saturday, which knocked out the city zoning ordinance. The Mayor said that indiscriminate building in all districts of the city, detrimental to city planning, would result if the ordinance is unconstitutional. He said he felt that most of the people of the city favor zoning regulation.

If a rehearing is not granted or results in affirmation of the decision, the Supreme Court will be asked to consider the matter en banc, the decision Saturday having been handed down by Division No. 2. The rules of the Supreme Court of the United States are understood to prohibit an appeal to that tribunal. City officials feel that in order to gain a reversal of the decision it will be necessary to arouse public opinion.

CASHIER IDENTIFIES MAN AS ONE OF EAST ALTON ROBBERS

Harry Ruhmann, 24 years old, a chauffeur with a police record, was identified today by Milton Lorton, cashier of the Illinois State Bank of East Alton, as one of the three men who robbed the bank of $1919 last Tuesday.

Lorton said he recognized Ruhmann as the man who kept a revolver pointed at him during the bank robbery.

Ruhmann denies any knowledge of the robbery. He lives at 2520 North Fifteenth street. He was arrested at his home yesterday, because the police were informed that he associated recently with Ray Renard of 2115 North Fifteenth street, who was arrested Saturday, and who was identified by a young woman, employed in the East Alton Bank, as one of the robbers. Renard has denied any part in the East Alton robbery.

Books and Profits.

In connection with your excellent editorial of Sunday, Feb. 12, "Books and Business," our experience may be of interest. For 15 years we have maintained a library for the free use of our employees. Most of the books are on subjects of direct interest to our organization, but the character building classics are not omitted. This is not philanthropy with us—our motive is profit. We have found that it pays a librarian is in charge, who is paid a cash bonus for inducing employees to read selected books. A recently adopted policy is to place in the hands of our people, short digests or advertisements of certain books in our library, which we want to stimulate special interest. We have received many compliments upon the efficiency and morale of our organization. Carefully selected personnel is one reason—another reason is good books. A Whiff for West Enders.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
A BRIGHT example of our city Board of Aldermen is again widened in the bill for the erection of a Garbage Plant out in our good old West End. It surely will be fine to get a whiff of the odor when those good old southern breezes blow. Would like some other West Enders' opinion on the above.

WEST END.

Doesn't Trust Reed.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
SENATOR REED opposed the League of Nations. Every day adds its testimony to the wickedness and poignancy of that blunder. Dr. Kirby, just returned from the Near East, where he has been engaged in humanitarian work, says that the failure of the United States to enter the league was responsible for the massacre of 50,000 Armenians; for the Turkish Government has decided to accept the Versailles treaty and the League of Nations. But when the United States pulled out, the Turks revised their minds and resumed their old practices.

Senator Reed is against prohibition. The wets know, the Senator knows, that if the night is won in favor of light wines and beer, that prohibition is just as certainly defeated as if the eighteenth amendment were repealed.

Now Senator Reed, for at least once in his career in upper Missouri, is right in his pitiless arraignment of the Republican majority in the Senate for seating Newberry and passing the hypocritical resolution disapproving the methods by which he was elected. The moral sense of the people approves his argument, and caustic way in which it was put was thoroughly deserved. It got under the skin all right.

But who trusts Reed? He has plenty of ability—unusual ability in fact—but who trusts him? In an important crisis he is just as likely to take the wrong tack as the right.

"Swells" in Canned Food.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
YOUR paper and all the others are featuring the Pure Food campaign that is now raging here. Now here are the facts. Every wholesale grocer in St. Louis, in fact every one in the United States, has always on hand a large stock of swelled canned goods, the more business he does the more swells he accumulates. When his salesman sells a merchant an order he takes a list of the swells to be returned and they come in in a never-ending stream. The packages of the canned goods give the wholesaler only a few months guarantee against swells and insist on them being shipped back in that time, but the retailer often does not return them till away past the time and still insists on getting credit for them, and the grocer does get credit. Every wholesaler tries to lose as little as possible on swells by constantly shipping them back to the packers, but it is an impossible task to keep up with them. The consequence is that every few days a truckload is sent to the dump and each wholesaler loses many thousands of dollars a year on swells. Now you may say, what has all this got to do with fair play? The Pure Food experts who don't know the first thing about the grocery business single out one wholesaler and go through his place and of course find a lot of swells. Your reporters are always on hand to write it up with some head lines about "Poisoned Food," etc. What you should say is that the same condition is found in every grocery house in St. Louis, and not publish any name or else publish all of them. Yours truly,
P. H. FRAGAN.

AN INTERESTING EXHIBIT.

The Post-Dispatch, in another column on this page, reprints under the heading "Get the Post-Dispatch" an article from the Jefferson City Daily Post, which is published by Heber Nations, brother of Gus O. Nations, chief prohibition officer in St. Louis, and an organ of the State administration. We reprint it as an interesting exhibit of the fanatic mind of those who advocate sweeping sumptuary laws and want them enforced at any cost to the rights of the people. It shows the length to which they will go in defaming the character of those who expose official lawlessness and in willingness to use the prohibition and police officers to intimidate and persecute them.

The Post-Dispatch vigorously supports law, order and the enforcement of law, giving to the extent of its power aid and encouragement to law officers in their work of enforcing law, but we vigorously protest the raiding and arresting of innocent persons and the maltreatment of persons accused of offenses, in violation of law and right. We stand for the prosecution and punishment of the guilty and the protection of the innocent and those merely accused of offenses from lawless outrage. It is unnecessary to say that the Post-Dispatch will continue to do its duty in this respect regardless of abuse or threats.

The article, however, is a revelation of what would be done if the element working for the suppression of popular rights and liberties were invested with complete power. "If they do these things in the green tree what shall be done in the dry?"

A POLITICAL BONUS.

Mr. Fordney and his Ways and Means Committee are going ahead with their bonus legislation, which was to have been expected. They will frame a bill and will presumably devise some sort of sales tax. The chances are that their bill will pass the House, but that will be the end of it.

This may be taken as a matter of course, because the bonus is purely a political proposition, and political experience will control the situation up to the point at which there is no further need of expediency.

All the members of the House have to go before their constituents in the fall, but only one-third of the Senators are subjected to the uncertainties of a plebiscite. The House, therefore, will naturally make its appeal to the American Legion vote by adopting the bonus, and it will quite as naturally conform to the President's suggestion by enacting a sales tax to pay the bonus. But two-thirds of the Senators are not obliged to bother their heads about the November elections. They can afford to take the responsibility of killing a bad measure.

That will satisfy practically everybody except the lobby of the American Legion. The Representatives can go back home and tell the former service men that their record in regard to the bonus is impeccable. The former service men will be correspondingly grateful, and if they are not, they at least have no convincing argument against the Representative in question. Inasmuch as the bill failed to pass the Senate, the statesmen's other constituents will have nothing to complain of, because no taxes have been imposed on them to meet the bonus.

After the election is over, Congress can afford to back and fill for another 18 months before the bonus issue will become serious again, and by that time something may have happened. That is a hope which sustains Senators and Representatives in many a troubled hour. The main thing now is to get through the 1922 elections. If it were necessary to vote away the United States Treasury, most Congressmen would be willing to do it, but it is not necessary for the Senate can bridge over the crisis without impairing any Representative's home following.

This may seem like a cynical view of bonus legislation, but it is a cynical situation. Nobody is really acting in good faith about it. Mr. Harding does not want it, but he feels that he is in a hole and cannot afford to be uncompromising in his opposition. Mr. Fordney and his associates know that it is indefensible economics, but they feel that it is good politics, and, with the election pending, it is good politics that interest them. The legion lobby must make a clamor, otherwise it could not justify its existence, but there are no illusions in Washington.

DOING JURY DUTY.

THE ZONING RIGHT OF CITIES.

If the State Supreme Court refuses, on reconsideration of the case, to reverse its decision invalidating the St. Louis zoning ordinance, then the subject of constitutional authorization should be brought to the constitutional convention. If public interest and the welfare of the many, even in the matter of esthetics, are not to take precedence under our present Constitution as interpreted by our Supreme Court, over narrow and destructive private interest, then the new Constitution should be written to protect the larger and better interest.

The court objects to "esthetic considerations" as "not in accord with the spirit of our democratic institutions." Call it "esthetic considerations" if you will, or the stabilization of property values, which is partly the aim of zoning ordinances, the zoning principle is being carried out in practice and accepted by courts all over the United States.

Zoning ordinances have become a regular institution in the large cities of the country as traffic ordinances. It is impossible to build a city on any organized plan without them. For every private-minded property owner whose particular object is frustrated by a wholesome zoning ordinance the property of a score of others is protected and the entire city benefited.

We do not undertake to judge of the facts or merits of the St. Louis case which became the occasion of the recent decision. It is conceivable that the zoning authority might be exceeded or that particular ordinances might be unduly restrictive. It is the principle that modern zoning considerations are "not in accord with the spirit of our democratic institutions" to which exception is taken as a reactionary, backward-looking view and as a policy under which the few would profit at the expense of the many.

The Federal Constitution will not interfere with zoning in St. Louis so long as it does not interfere in states other than Missouri. All Missouri need be concerned about in this matter is the protection of the zoning right under its own Constitution.

FROZEN CREDITS: FROZEN POLITICS.

A statement issued from the White House, based on the report of Comptroller of the Currency Crissinger, declares that the condition of banks shows "the most satisfactory turn in the financial affairs of the country that has been registered by a bank statement since the conclusion of 1919." The process of liquidation, continues the statement, "has been proceeding at such an excellent rate that it may fairly be said that we are well on the road to getting the 'frozen credits' thawed out. In this regard, indeed, it is by far the most satisfactory showing that has been made since the phrase 'frozen credits' was invented."

What, then, with frozen credits thawed out and resources of the national banks alone showing an increase of $406,000,000 over September of last year, is the matter with business? Liquidation has taken place. The money is available. The people are here to work and to buy. There is only one essential difference between business resources of today and the business resources of boom times. This is the difference of foreign markets. Europe is impoverished and the currency of the several nations, as a result, is in various degrees of demoralization. The story is now a hackneyed one. As the need of the United States is foreign markets the need of Europe is credits. The excess of the one is the need of the other. Only the machinery is lacking whereby these wants may be made to cancel one another.

Yet the White House, which issues the statement about the improved resources of our banks and the thawing out of frozen credits, hesitates and maintains a cold, discouraging attitude toward participation in an economic conference which would be directly aimed at the canceling of the crucial needs both of Europe and America. Timidity, taboo, prevails over courage and wisdom. "Frozen politics" have succeeded "frozen credits."

The administration was driven by public demand into an arms limitation conference. Must it now be shored into liberal economic relations with Europe? Cannot America make as effective a demand for her starving unemployed as she made for the world's future peace?

MR. ANTWERP'S OPINION.

"SOMEHOW I cannot get used to reading that we have marines and soldiers in places where we have no business to have them." Mr. Antwerp said.

"It is one of the perils of preparedness that if you have armed forces they are always up to enterprises of which most of us know very little. For instance, how many people in the United States know that four little countries in Latin-America and the West Indies are asking us to withdraw our forces?"

"Not many of us know it, you may be sure. Yet it is a fact that Cuba, Haiti, Santo Domingo and Nicaragua are all asking us to leave them to their own devices. In Nicaragua we recently had to withdraw a force of marines and substitute another because of the feeling between the people down there and our men."

"We have in addition, Porto Rico, which wants self-determination, and the Philippines, which would like to be free. It is not possible for us to guess what there may be in extension of our continued imperialism and our tendency to inflict our might upon weaker peoples. There must be something we do not know about it for one administration after another to keep it up."

"Still, whenever I read about it I feel ashamed. Is there anything really that can justify us in what we are doing? I cannot believe it. The army and navy is not a collection of men, but a collection of men who are all of this. Do you like it? I don't," Mr. Antwerp said.

HAD MADE THE TRIP.

Teleped Johning and Apostrophe Smif sat pretty on the wagon which was laboriously drawn by a team of mules. The wagon was loaded with approximately one ton of dynamite, consigned to a mining camp up in the hills.

The road over which they were traveling had one peculiar feature, it did not go anywhere. It ran around the base of the foothills, some 50 miles to the north, there it turned, by almost imperceptible degrees, and headed south again. At the southern point of the hills it swung around and returned whence it had come. Other roads intersected its course at intervals, followed it for a distance, then departed. So, if one followed the main thoroughfare, he must needs find himself traveling in a circle.

Teleped Johning had been giving some thought to a possible contingency.

"Say, 'Postrophe,'" he asked, "does of wagon break down, what at us gwine?"

"Does of wagon break down, you watch mah smoke! Ah goes for fuel, and Ah goes for fuel," replied Apostrophe. "Does of wagon break down, all at dynamite blows up right now."

Presently, as they were crossing a bridge that spanned a small creek, the thing happened. There sounded a creaking of timbers; the bridge bowed sidewise and began sinking toward the bottom of the gully, some three feet below.

Teleped made good his promise—he disappeared in a cloud of dust. Apostrophe Smif, paralyzed by the shock of impending danger, remained seated. After a time, as no explosion occurred, he climbed down and unhooked the mules and tethered them to some bushes. Then he ate heavy of the rations they had brought along. Then he rested. So on and so forth, for three days he alternately ate and rested, hoping that 'Teleped would recover from his panic and return.

On the morning of the fourth day he described a travel-worn figure, having come from the direction they had come with the team. The figure was covered with dust, and though it made fairly good time on the level ground, the slightest undulation in the level of the surface revealed that much of its original speed and enthusiasm was spent. The figure was that of 'Teleped.

When he recognized the spot where he had arrived, he hesitated, and made a feeble attempt to turn around. The effort dissipated his last remnant of strength, and he sank down beside the road.

"Hello, 'Teleped," said Smif, "what at you bin for de last free days?"

"Teleped let out a feeble groan.

"Been comin' back most of de time, Ah guess."

"Huh! Thought you gwine fur off!"

"Ain't no such place as 'fur off,' nigger. 'At mah Columbus sure 'buff tote de truth, dis earf am round!"

JEFF ROTORBAR.

THE RIVER.

(The beauty of the Little Red river—the waters of which are greenish blue—inspired the following poem. The fanciful names given the rivers refer to the Little Red and the White.)

The Turquoise river rises high
In Ozark hills, and wanders by White little towns and rustic homes
All shadowed by great tree-clad domes
Down to the Liquidambar.

The Turquoise river gently flows
By cypress woods and tupelo
As though it loved to loiter there Amid the reeds and rushes, where
It meets the Liquidambar.

I know full well the Maker's hand
Never rested on a fairer land
Nor made a lovelier mountain stream
Than this, whose laughing waters gleam
And join the Liquidambar.

In springtime, when the flowers bloom
And trees smile, after winter's gloom,
The waters, decked with petals gay,
Go singing on their happy way
To meet the Liquidambar.

When crises in Martine's breeze
Hang pendant cradles from the trees
They seem to echo sweet the song
Of waters flowing swift along Toward the Liquidambar.

In autumn, when the wildwoods vie
In colors with the sunset sky,
The waters mirror back the glow
And murmur softly as they go
Down to the Liquidambar.

At eventide, when day grows dim,
And throbs the plaintive vesper hymn
Of thrushes, when the waters grow
More dark and seem to sadly go
To join the Liquidambar.

I know that I shall sweeter rest
In Mother Earth's great loving breast
If, when I near the river lie,
It passing cradles a lullaby
To join the Liquidambar.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

GET THE POST-DISPATCH.

From the Jefferson City Daily Post, published by Heber Nations, brother of Gus O. Nations, Chief Prohibition Officer of St. Louis.

The most potent influence for violation of the prohibition law in St. Louis is the editorial page of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The usually great fair news policy of that great paper is enriched every time it goes to press by the intemperate ranting of its editorial page. Every method the officials charged with enforcement of the prohibition law have used for detecting and apprehending violators has been attacked in vicious, uncontrolled attacks from the rapid pen of the editorial director. The editorial attitude of the paper on that question seems to indicate that the action of the officers is a personal affront to him.

If when the constitutional amendment was passed, the editorial page of the Post-Dispatch had made a campaign for law enforcement and had urged its readers to abide by the law because that question seems to indicate that the action of the officers is a personal affront to him.

Has the editorial director of the Post-Dispatch ever, by word of pen or mouth, urged compliance with the law?

The position of this man is of public interest because it is one of power for evil. Every violator of the prohibition law takes courage and comfort from the fact that he is not alone. He looks to the editorial page of the Post-Dispatch for the words of the common people.

If we were to offer suggestions to the Federal force in St. Louis and to the Police Department, one of them would be this: The editorial of the Post-Dispatch read as though they had been written by a man whose appetite is stronger than his love for law and order. If it is possible for a man's thirst and his hatred for a duty essential to law to direct the editorial policy of a great journal, it is time to move on his position with weapons as powerful as his own.

There are several Federal inspectors and a host of policemen in St. Louis. It should be easy to get a line on the personal conduct of any man whose desires are suspected, without making him until the proper time.

If this suggestion should result in the publication, some fine day, of the name of the editorial writer and his photograph on the front page of the other St. Louis newspapers, the reading public would get a better perspective of his editorial attitude.

JAPAN AT THE CONFERENCE.

From the New York World.

By universal consent the Japanese go away from the Washington conference with more friends and with greater prestige than they entered it. They came reluctantly. They came believing that they were being hailed before an international tribunal to account for their sins. They were hailed. They righted a few wrongs. They promised solemnly to right some others. On a few very big questions they even avoided making a promise. But whether they gave up or held fast, they neither whined nor threatened, but dealt in sober realities, and they secured in addition to tangible assets in Asia an additional moral credit, a thing no nation can afford to deride. Where the Japanese won, they won because the underlying facts of the situation favored them and because their delegation was well prepared and skilful in arguing from the facts. The Japanese won wherever the weakness of the Chinese and Russian Governments made it impossible to advance a constructive substitute for the Japanese claim. They will keep their word, while the Chinese and Russian Governments remain weak. The Japanese have done that it is not necessary to fear even for a relatively weak nation to enter an international conference and debate what it regards as its "vital interests." If the facts are on its side and its moral credit, a thing no nation can afford to deride, but even without these advantages, it is not necessary to fear even for a relatively weak nation to enter an international conference and debate what it regards as its "vital interests." A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do what calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating. No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 10c and 30c.

MAN SHOT DURING QUARREL WITH WIFE

Woman Says Revolver Was Discharged Accidentally in Fight for Its Possession.

Screaming children in the house a few doors from the Carr Street Police Station at 7:30 o'clock last night, attracted the police, and at the home of Samuel and Fannie Benigno, 1194 North Tenth street, the officers found Benigno struggling with his wife for the possession of a revolver, which she held in her right hand. Benigno had been shot in the left thigh and his wife had cuts on the face and hands.

They had been in a quarrel over the children, and Benigno said his wife shot him without provocation. Mrs. Benigno told a different story. She admitted the quarrel, and added that her husband had struck her in the face with a piece of wood. Both then ran for the revolver, which lay on a table, and in the fight for its possession, she said, it was accidentally discharged.

Benigno was taken to the city hospital in a serious condition. Mrs. Benigno was arrested and released on bond.

their interest. Stories were current of the hardship suffered by indentured Indian labor in the Fiji Islands. The British Government in India was not responsible, of course, for the activities of other British legislatures in Africa and Fiji. But that fact did not forestall resentment. In the opinion of Lord Chelmsford, Viceroy of India "until 1920, the dominant factor in the present Indian situation is the race and color issue." This issue, he believes, "has become the unifying force in India and through all the diversities of creeds and races it is creating a unity."

Finally, the pressure of the economic situation should be noted. It is heavy enough at all times. The ordinary margin of subsistence of the cultivating classes is a small one. The official document, "the probable smaller in India than in any other country with an equal claim to civilization. . . . The average cultivator is poor and helpless to a degree to which Europe can afford little parallel."

And the condition of the Indian peasant, always near the deadline, was now made worse than ever by war prices and the unhappy coincidence of a monsoon that failed in bringing the normal rainfall. The situation was not so bad when the war ended. But the crop failure of 1918-19 was the worst recorded since the famine of 20 years ago.

Lead Drums to Britain. And to a public which sometimes sends Presidents to the White House on the issue of a "full dinner pail" it should not seem odd that the Indian peasant thought of death and war prices in terms of politics, and treasured them, along with his other grievances, against the British Government.

A moderate extension of Indian self-rule was put into effect after the fat was in the fire. But under the circumstances an offer of this sort was doomed to remain an intellectual affair—pitted against emotions all too strong for it.

Druth and war price—discriminatory treatment of Indians in the colonies—the Rowland act—Amritsar—the "Khilafat" question—these matters run the gamut of the emotions: physical, racial, national and religious.

In short, a series of exceedingly unpopular happenings struck India just at a time when economic conditions had already produced discontent—plenty. It happened to be a time, too, when India—fresh from her war service and crowned with laurels—believed herself advancing to a new dignity and freedom.

BOLSHEVIST STORY OF EMPEROR'S END TOLD IN PAMPHLET

The names of the last two are not given in Bykoff's pamphlet. Grand Duke Michael, brother of the late Czar, was shot at Perm in July, 1918, according to Bykoff's account and the Grand Duke Sergius Mikhailovich, Igor Konstantinovich, Konstantin Konstantinovich and Ivan Konstantinovich were killed about the same time at Alapaievsk, north of Ekaterinburg. These members of the Romanoff family had previously been held as prisoners in Ekaterinburg, but were transferred because of the uncertain position of Ekaterinburg with the approach of the Czechoslovaks.

The above story bears out that told previously by Pierre Gilliard, a Swiss, who was in contact with the Czar's son, Alexis, and who was the only member of the Czar's household to survive. Gilliard's story was printed in the Post-Dispatch Sunday magazine, Feb. 17, 1921.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Feb. 20.—A frame house in the Italian quarter in Woodbridge avenue, Highland Park, was blown to pieces today, and two other nearby were badly wrecked by an explosion, which the police believe, was caused by a bomb. No one was injured, first reports said. Ralph Wrennough, 32, the only occupant of the wrecked house, was arrested, pending an investigation.

DE ANDREIS BADLY BEATEN

Screw Company Team Runs Over Rivals, Scoring Four Goals to None.

While a score of 5 to 2 would indicate that the Scullins completely outplayed the Ben Millers in the St. Louis Soccer League feature game at High School Field, yesterday, such was far from being the case. Truth of the matter, between the penalty lines, the losers had all the better of the argument. But in the end goals count and the Scullins had them. The Screw Co. downed the DeAndreis, 4-0, in the opener.

The record crowd of the season for league contests, numbering more than 2000 paid admissions, turned out for the twin bill.

From one penalty kick to another the Millers played sensational soccer. They forced the Scullin halfbacks to the limit and many times passed these men. However, getting past Tate Brady was something else. George Bradley was back at fullback beside Brady, but he was wild, and did not get the usual distance on his kicks. Tate repeatedly walked into a bunch of Millers and took the ball away and then cleared.

With the Scullins it was different. Once past the halfback line, it meant trouble for "Goalie" Reidy. The Western U. S. F. A. champions passed perfectly and made the best of the openings offered them.

Scullins Score Early.

The contest was only 10 minutes old when the Scullins counted the first goal. Prior to this, all the play had been in front of the Scullin uprights. However, after the ball had been cleared, the forwards broke away clean. Reidy stopped a shot, but with no place to throw, he sprawled on the ground with the ball under him. Referee McSweney blew his whistle and on the toss-up, Zarschel tapped the sphere into the corner of the net.

Some 10 minutes later, the Scullins again scored. Cliff Brady forced a corner kick and Reichtold centered perfectly. The ball went to Mulvey, who passed to Zarschel. The big halfback led the net. Then the Millers' first goal came when Jimmy Dunn headed the sphere into the net during a scrimmage. At the time the point was counted, Oellerman and Tate Brady were on the ground as the result of a collision. The half ended, 2-1.

Scullins' Defense Strong.

With the start of the closing period, the Scullins, this time favored by the wind, rushed matters. After 5 minutes, Reidy cleared a hard shot from Jimmy Nolan. However, the ball went directly to Mike Brannigan, who sent it into the net. Then the Millers again took the upper hand and gave the Scullins backs a busy time, but they were unable to break through the strong defense of the league leaders.

After 20 minutes of battling, the Scullins again broke away. Cliff Brady took a shot from the penalty area. The ball hit the crossbar, rebounded to Schwartz, who tapped it through. At this time the battling became exceedingly hot and even Elmer Schwartz, who once saved a world, was calling Hap Marre for illegal charging.

Two minutes after the fourth goal for the Scullins, the Millers tallied. Dunn again scored. Dunn's boot was a beautiful shot from the penalty line. The ball went high into the corner of the upright. "Goalie" had a chance to save. Schwartz scored on a penalty kick about five minutes before the end.

In the second half, the Millers introduced Joe Danaher, at halfback. Danaher came from the Paulians. He played a great game, being in on almost every play.

Star "Goalie" Injured.

In the opening tilt, the DeAndreis played without the services of "Goalie" Dave Barnett, who has a bad hand. Jimmy McCaffery, Emmett Donovan and Tommy White took turns between the uprights. Jerry Kavanaugh made his debut at center halfback for the Screw Co., with Eddie Burke moving to the forward line.

Three of the Screw Co. points came in the first half while McCaffery was in goal. All of them were hard shots. Gogel, Burke and McCarthy counting. Wimer tallied in the second period, when he headed past White.

As a result of yesterday's games, the Scullins practically clinched the championship for this season. The three more rounds remain to be played and the men of Brady have a margin of five points over the DeAndreis. The points are as follows: Scullins 24, De Andreis 19, Ben Millers 16 and Screw Co. 15.

Wray's Column

Praise From Sir Hubert.

AT MORAN, manager of the Cincinnati club, who piloted two forlorn hopes into pennant winners and one into a world's championship, is quoted as tossing a few compliments St. Louisward. These come so seldom that they will bear repetition. Mr. Pat is speaking:

"Stock and Smith, who held out on their St. Louis contracts last season, have come into camp early," says Pat, "and Hornsby will doubtless be persuaded in the near future. This means a lot of trouble for the three or four Western clubs, right at the start. Last year the Cardinals started in a crippled condition; this year they will begin in great shape—and when you remember that they are the hardest hitters in the business, it means war and worry for other people. I'd like to see St. Louis do well, inasmuch as they want a left-hand pitcher, while we seek a right-hander. They may not compete in the market against us, and I only hope they are in elegant shape in April. They ought to take the Cubs and Pirates seriously in the early games—but I have hopes of taking them and getting a nice margin on those batters."

Hitting on all cylinders from the beginning, the Cardinals on 1931 form, and possibly have it in them to give the bough-and-paid-for Giants a warm argument.

Some Virtue in Managers.

YOUNG CORBETT, Billy Rothwell by name, conqueror of Terry McGovern when Terry was in his prime, has quit Broadway with a new suit of clothes, a lot of good wishes and a few hundred dollars thanks to the bounty of Charles Stenham of the New York Giants.

Broke and discouraged, longing for home, the down-and-out ring star of old days had not the courage to go back to Denver the way he had so often come into that town in the golden days of his youth—on the brake beam. He wanted to go back with a "front" and greet his old pals and so Stenham staked him and his.

Corbett, like many another of the old school, frittered away ample earnings of his halcyon days and, when no longer capable of fighting, had to grope his way along the half-world as best he could.

Famous fighters are rescued from that today by their managers. One of the few good things a modern manager does is to save his fighters from themselves. The reason is, of course, selfish, since their boxers' good conduct makes for better efficiency and longer service. The manager who shares with them.

Managers of today watch their proteges carefully and steer them clear of indulgences that caused the old-time star, Minnie of the old days were wont to share their dissolutions with their fighters.

Champions Are Not Supermen.

ANGELICA CLUB LOSES FIRST POINT IN SUIT

Judge J. Hugo Grimm in a decision handed down today in the case of the Angelica Club v. the City of St. Paul, Minn., has ruled against the city. The city, which had filed by the club to strike out that part of the answer which set forth the Angelica Club coming into court with unclean hands.

Judge Grimm handed down a long decision calling attention to various points. However, this was the only one which has any bearing on the case, which will be held at a later date.

St. Louis Bowler Makes Strong Bid For Tenpin Title

Stein Near Top of Chicago Tourney as Result of Spurt in Last Two Days.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—A number of real matches are scheduled in the world's individual tenpin title tournament, now in progress in the Coliseum Annex. Most of all the attractions in the big pin meet are now worth while, as the entire field is battling for points on fairly even terms.

The two suburbanites, Jimmy Blouin, Blue Island, and Joe Hradek, will meet tonight in what promises to be a real battle. W. Wernicke, Chicago, will oppose Mort Lindsey, Stamford, Conn., on the same squad, and as Wernicke has been putting up an uphill battle and Lindsey is anxious to gain back the points that he has lost in the last few days, some unusual bowling is looked for.

With but five more days of play, it is now anybody's race for the individual title. Many of the contestants who were considered out of the running in the first days of the big pin meet have put on a burst of speed, and the entire field is now battling for the lead.

A number of entrants who started off as though they were going to burn up the tournament, including the celebrated Mort Lindsey of Stamford (Conn.) have now been stopped and are in the danger zone. Lindsey will not be decided until the closing night.

Stein Makes Title Bid.

Otto Stein, of the St. Louis entrant, is one of the men who has come to the front in the last few days. Stein was far behind in the first few days of the meet, but has now jumped into third position in the standings, due to his excellent shooting the last few days.

The present rule is not so bad, although not logical. We sympathize with the viewpoint implied in the laughing remark of James A. Babbitt of Haverford, member of the Rules Committee, who defended the goal from the touchdown. "Well," he said with a smile, "I hope you radicals don't take down the goal posts altogether."

We owe something to tradition and precedent.

ST. PAUL, Minn.—William Oliver of St. Paul, amateur indoor skating champion of the Northwest, won the outdoor title at the Northwestern outdoor skating races here. He won first place in each of the four senior events.

CHRISTIANA, Norway.—Harold Reom, the skater, who on Saturday broke the world's record for the 500 meters, was awarded the world's skating championship.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 20.—The world's one mile motorcycle record for a seven-lap track of one minute flat was lowered twice yesterday when Peter Markey of Montreal, Quebec, made the distance in 59.2.5 seconds, and when T. R. ("Boots") Murphy of Miami went him one better by making the mile in 59 seconds flat. The events were timed by four officials of the National Cycling Association.

Bids to Decide Site for Soccer Cup Title Final

No Official Action Against St. Louis Has Been Taken, President Healey Says.

The committee to handle the national soccer final between the Scullins of St. Louis and the Eastern winner has not yet functioned, notwithstanding reports from Philadelphia last Saturday that St. Louis had lost the classic. This was the announcement today from J. G. Barrett, vice president of the St. Louis Soccer League and secretary of the Western Division, following a long-distance telephone conversation with George Healey of Detroit, president of the U. S. F. A.

Barrett appealed to Healey, following what the local officials at a meeting yesterday termed an injustice to St. Louis and Winton Barker, chairman of the Western Committee.

In his talk with Healey, Barrett asserted that Healey said that the first he knew of it was a newspaper dispatch from the East. He said that, as a member of the committee, he had not been advised of a meeting, and that anything done to date was not in the regular order of business, and therefore could not stand.

Healey also told Barrett that he would send a wire to Thomas Cahill asking him to explain why he (Cahill) and Stewart had sent out information regarding the game, or allowed it to be sent out.

Healey to Call Meeting.

It is probable that within a short time a meeting of the committee will be called in a neutral city by Healey, with all members of the committee present. At this time bids from all cities which hope to try for the classic would be received. Barrett advised Healey that the St. Louis bid might be revised, but that he was not certain of this. However, he did advise the U. S. F. A. president that 10 per cent was entirely too low.

That Detroit will make little effort to get the game was evinced at a meeting of the Michigan State Association last Friday. At this gathering Healey told the delegates that it would take $2000 to handle the game, and that if 28 men would put up $160 each a bid would be turned in. However, according to Healey's conversation with Barrett, he (Healey) was the only one willing to put up this amount.

A. A. U. Officials Meet.

At a meeting to be held Thursday night, it is expected that a site for holding the Western A. A. U. amateur boxing bouts, scheduled for March 8, 9 and 10, will be selected. The Armory is favored.

Butch-Bandy date at the Coliseum Feb. 25, will give Al Walker time to run out to Salt Lake City for a bout Feb. 27 with Kid Davis. He hopes to return here later for a bout with Patsy Flanagan, provided he wins from Peeewe Kaiser.

Patsy Flanagan expects to get a good match for early in March at the Coliseum as a result of the show tomorrow night. He hopes whoever man wins will consent to box him. Walker already has done so, but Kaiser is hanging fire.

Harry Wills, the colored heavyweight, who is spoken of as the logical opponent for Jack Dempsey for the world's title, has started training for his coming bout with Kid Norfolk at Madison Square Garden.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.

STANISLAUS ZBYSZKO, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, plans to retire undefeated in May and to place his title in the care of his younger brother, Wladek.

The younger of the grappling Zbyszkos is to engage Joe Stecher, former champion, in a bout in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night. If Wladek wins, his older brother will make immediate plans for retirement.

Four Pikers Out Of Rolla Contest

Washington Players, Battered by Oklahoma, Needed for Later Games.

The Piker basketball team which is scheduled to play at Rolla tonight will be without the services of four of its regulars on account of injuries. Coach Rider this morning received word from Coach Appleman asking that other players be sent to Rolla to replace Thompson, Schnau, Thumser and Crist. Thumser and Thompson, in particular, have been bothered with hip injuries which were considerably aggravated during the Oklahoma game Saturday.

McMahon, O'Brien and De Belt were the players who departed for Rolla. The Piker lineup tonight will be Johnson and Berry, forwards; O'Brien, center; Cantwell and De Belt, guards.

Hard Games This Week.

This week will mark the heaviest on the Piker basketball schedule. On Wednesday night Kansas will call at Francis Gymnasium for its second tilt with Coach Appleman's men. The former contest having gone to the Jayhawkers by a lopsided score. The Kansas are now in second place in the Valley ranking. The Nebraska quintet will be seen in action Saturday night, at Francis Gym in what will be the Pikers' last home game of the season.

The Pikers lost to Nebraska earlier this season by a 2-point margin and in view of the fact that the game was played away and that the Pikers have improved considerably, the Red and Green outfit has a good chance to cop a victory from the Cornhuskers.

Cue Tourney Arranged.

A Class A three-cushion tournament, with eight entries will be started at Aratas tonight. The entrants are Cissel, Laws, Deardorf, Hart, Dr. Macklin, Patterson, Kirk and Schlamp. Dr. Macklin plays Patterson tonight.

Normandie Signs Sandy Auclerlonie, Noted Scotch Pro

Former St. Andrews Instructor Brought to U. S. by Algonquin Last Year.

Sandy Auclerlonie, Scotch-born golf professional, whose prowess with the maulie made him famous in Europe before he was brought to the Algonquin Golf Club as instructor a year ago, has been engaged in a similar capacity by the Normandie Golf Club to succeed Jim Fairman, Dr. J. B. Rule of the Greens Committee announced last night.

Auclerlonie is considered one of the best golfers in the world at playing the maulie shot. So great is his skill, and so fine his control of the maulie that he can shoot a ball off a watch without harming the timepiece.

Auclerlonie is a member of a family of Scotch golfers and athletes who have been famous in British sporting circles for many years. One member of the family came to America a decade ago and made a reputation as a course architect. Sandy before coming to the country served as professional at one of the famous St. Andrews courses. His fame was greater as an instructor than as a championship player.

One Club Without "Pro."

That leaves only one vacancy, Kirkwood still being without a successor to Tom Aiken, who is to devote his entire attention to the care of the links, which last year were enlarged.

The list of professionals at the local clubs follows:

Jack Burgess, St. Louis G. C. C. East Doyle, Algonquin. Sandy Auclerlonie, Normandie. Bob Foulis, Bellevue. E. R. Duwee, Forest Park. Donald Harrison, Triple A. Arthur Smith, Westwood. Fred Clarkson, Glen Echo. Charley Clarkson, Midland Valley.

Ray Cole, Sunset Hill. Duke Winters, Riverview. The Sunset Hill Country Club, which through the efforts of the late Jesse L. Carleton was awarded the 1922 tournament of the Missouri State Golf Association, now is in the field. However, according to the schedule, which will be held just before the State event, if the usual schedule is followed, neither date has been selected, but the State tournament probably will be held early in June.

Normandie and Algonquin also are after the district tournament, but reconstruction at the two clubs will handicap them, whereas the Sunset Club is in excellent condition and is better fitted for tournament play than ever before. Sunset also has an argument in the fact that it never has held a district event.

The district tournament, it will be remembered, formerly was the city championship, started by the St. Louis Country Club, where it was held annually. Later, when the Municipal Association made a success of its tourney, the district association was organized and since then there have been two tournaments annually in which the title honors virtually coincide.

Riverview Open in Spring.

The Riverview Country Club, the newest of the golf clubs, will open nine holes of its contemplated 18-hole course in the spring. Construction was begun last year. Duke Winters, assistant to Bob Foulis at Bellevue for 10 years, will be the professional at Riverview. The organization has admitted only 125 golf members, owing to the limited playing facilities. The number, of course, will be increased when the course expands into the regular 18 holes.

Why American Women —Have— THE BEST FIGURES They're the Most Active

By HEDDA HOYT.

AMERICAN women have the best figures in the world because they are the most active. Servants in the United States combined with the dance craze, has raised the percentage of perfect shapes in America so far beyond that of France, Spain or Italy or the countries of Latin and South America that it makes any real comparison almost absurd.

A good figure requires no corset. Because of this fact American women have revolted against corset domination to date that the corset business has had to undergo a complete revolution in style and type.

In this near-corsetless era there is one big question in most every woman's mind. That is: What is going to become of her figure if she continues in corsetless comfort? She is like a prisoner who, having thrown off his shackles, is frightened by his freedom. The corset is a shackle of long standing.

It begins with babyhood. The infant's band or binder is inflicted on us from the start, and the female of our species has continued this binding by means of whalebone and steel throughout centuries. Now, however, smart women have permanently relegated these heavy steel-ribbed frames of torture to the junk heap. Ungrudging from them at night, one looked and felt like an old acrobat.

There will always be women who need some sort of support about the waist and hips, but the corset of six years ago seems a torture of barbarism to us now. In its place we have the low-busted models in satins and soft materials with elastic over the abdomen and hips. The straight-line figure is here and here to stay. The nipped-in waist line, which is popular in Paris at the present moment, will not regain popularity in the United States. French women have by nature larger hips and smaller waists than we American women. They are like the full-blown rose and we the budding flower. Therefore, we must not allow ourselves to follow them in our corset grooming.

Certainly no race of women can better afford to go without corsets or slightly corseted than we Americans. Our hips are less pronounced than those of foreign women and we have less obesity about the shoulders. This is because we are more athletic, more active. The housewife needs no dietetic assistance to reduce superfluous hips after working all day over a broom and a carpet sweeper. The girl who swims, rides horseback, plays tennis and golf seldom needs heavy stays to confine too lax muscles. Dancing is the working girl's saving grace. Few dancers are bulky about the hips. Fundamentally we are a lean limbed lot. We need not fear the consequences of insufficient lacing. If one fears a slight enlargement of the waist line one must remember that Venus, that perfect symbol of womanly figure, had a large waist. Gazing at her one can scarcely imagine her beseeching her maids, had she any, to rub out the creases left from corset stays each night before retiring.

The flapper has no corset worries for some time to come. Nor has the woman of slight figure. They can wait until the large waist bugaboo appears before worrying over losing their figures.

For the woman of the over-medium build the most popular model is low bustled and sloping out under the bust, graduating to a higher back with front boning over the abdomen. Bands of elastic extend over the thighs, giving complete comfort while in sitting posture. The brassiere plays an important part in the corset drama, since the whole business of holding in the diaphragm falls to it. The latest and most interesting types have elastic over the diaphragm and gussets of elastic in the side backs to confine the flesh under the shoulders. The center back is boned rather heavily. Slight figures continue to wear the silk bandeaus. Heavy satins and silk brocades in pinks and lavenders are favored materials for these models, as well as the usual batistes.

AS soon as you notice baby has a cold do something for it. Put a little liquid absorbent in the nose when you put the child to bed, rub the chest and throat with some good oil—the oil of eucalyptus is excellent—and give a good physic. The treatment at the very first symptom of a cold may avert serious illness.

If every mother would teach her child to put everything in its place she would not only save work for herself but she would lay the foundation of a future neat and systematic home for her girls and boys. Begin in babyhood. As soon as the child walks it can be taught to put the toys in place when through playing with them. A child even younger than that will consider it great sport to put the clothing in the proper place after being undressed. Thus trained the good habit becomes established.

Insist upon obedience from your child no matter how trivial the command or request may be. If you say to your 2-year-old, "Son, please close that door," and he pays no heed to your request, as is often the way of 2-year-olds, in a kindly manner see that he closes the door. If you never overlook a delinquency, even the slightest, the child will soon realize that mother is to be obeyed and will obedience becomes a natural habit.

For children under 10 years fruits served either fresh, baked or stewed and simple custards and puddings are much better forms of desserts than preserves and rich pastries. The sweets required for the well-balanced supper can be supplied in the form of plain cakes such as sponge cake, lady fingers and cookies or by sweet sandwiches. One physician recommends molasses sandwiches. Of course, sweets should always be given in moderation. If candy is allowed it should be of the simple variety, the very best, and should be given only at the end of a meal—never between meals.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

COMPROMISING WITH YOUR CONSCIENCE.

YOUR conscience is a very delicate and fragile affair. It is given you as a guardian—to watch over you and keep you straight. But it is easily persuadable, and can be very readily thrust aside. Furthermore, it weakens with every discouragement, and if it is roughly treated it will soon perish altogether.

We begin as children to compromise with our consciences. If we keep it up too long there is no conscience left to keep us on the right road by the time we are grown.

The child's conscience tells him that it is wrong to run away, that it will grieve his mother, and perhaps get him into serious trouble.

He feels that just going around the corner is not really running away, that he intends to come back in a little while, and that if nobody finds it out, no harm will result. What his mother doesn't know will not worry her.

Around the corner he sees a fire engine, or a fascinating fight, or two children playing a new game, and he continues on his journey. Conscience begins to upbraid him when he starts to return. But it is too late then, the mischief is done.

The man who takes an unfair business advantage of another man tells his conscience that the victim is feeble-minded, and that somebody else would get the better of him sooner or later.

If his conscience begins to believe that, it will cease to operate in all moral crises, and presently will be winking at burglary and grand larceny.

A safe rule is to be sure your conscience is right in the first place, which it always is, and to obey its mandates.

Implanted somewhere in your conscience is a distinct knowledge of the difference between right and wrong. Very few people are born so unusual that they do not recognize this difference instinctively.

Employ that knowledge and you will go straight. And inasmuch as a straight line is the shortest distance between two points, you will reach success far more quickly, and infinitely more surely, if you take the straight road indicated by conscience, than the crooked road pointed out by weakling self-interest.

Fashion News Notes

NEW YORK.—Crushed flowers adorn a number of new hats here. Many hats are of hair cloth with moderately wide brims around which the crushed roses or morning glories or poppies are lightly strewn. Two or three brims are by no means unusual, especially in the haircloth. The lower brims have been filled in with flowers, like an esthetic sort of military tile, while the top brim flares upward or downward. While the new straw hats are often a bright red, they are usually of some light shade of tan. Light silk sport hats continue as popular as, ever for resort wear.

MIAMI, Fla.—Sleeveless jackets prove so numerous and smart that one wonders why people ever wore any other kind of spring gown. Cotton, that once humble but now aristocratic fabric, is the material of which many of the sleeveless coats down here are made. Usually the coat matches a cotton dress in color and shade, though cotton coats in colors contrasting with the dress are also seen. Cretonne lends itself effectively to contrasts like this. One rather new feature with splashy heliotrope morning glories of a cream background had a little sleeveless jacket of plain heliotrope, the patch pockets darned with cream-colored wool.

NEW YORK.—Two straight oblongs of embroidery caught at the shoulder form the chief trimming of some afternoon frocks in one of the shops here. The panels fall in front and back in straight lines from neck to hem like stripes of wall paper. Though the panels are wide, they are not so wide as the gown, and except for the undoubted beauty of the embroidery, is a good deal like that of the sandwich. A wide crepe has panels of velvet cream lace. A smoked pearl satin is brightened by panels of French blue beaded with crystal bugles. A crimson tulle has panels of jet and a crimson jet tassel at the hem serve to emphasize the uneven hem line.

LONDON.—Shoes of patent leather or an gray suede here are to be fashionable in the spring, the two materials being united in the one shoe. For evening wear there is a black patent leather sandal with heel and straps of the gray suede. A colorful pump with a very high toe, suitable for either evening or afternoon, has lozenge shaped insets of suede in two tones of gray. A shoe for afternoon wear is of the suede in a modest sandal design, and it is trimmed with a tiny edging of black leather. The walking pumps have flat heels, and are developed not only in gray suede and patent leather but also in patent leather combined with suede in tan and brown. There are also gray and tan suede shoes that lace to the knee, but are more trimly fitted than the Russian boot, although lozenge around the ankle.

NEW YORK.—It is all very well to say that a bright red gown is never in such good taste as a gown of white or gray. The bright red gown is here, and here to stay for a considerable period. Velvet appears to be the favorite material for the gown of scarlet or pomegranate. Satin, however, is sometimes used and a few evening frocks of very vivid red are to be seen. A gown composed wholly of pomegranate velvet is a little too much of an eye-fel, even for this flamboyant spring. The velvet is relieved by pearls, long sleeves and flowing cape of georgette in a trifle darker shade. For shoulder straps, narrow frocks use two or three strands of big, brilliant red beads which cast a luscious ruby shadow on the skin.

PALM BEACH, Fla.—Ruffles and pearl buttons are returning to the category of things which are smart. Two or three evening gowns seen here have ruffles not only around the skirt, but also on the bodice and over the shoulders. This is a touch not employed for many a moon. Other gowns, mostly afternoon frocks of colored voile, have little ruffles from ruffle to ruffle, and a touch over each hip. This, needless to say, is a mode for the strictly slender. With materials so rich in design and shade, few trimmings except of beads are used. But on many frocks of gingham and linen there are multiple rows of tiny pearl buttons.

PARIS.—Bits of brilliant cretanne have appeared even on chiffon evening gowns, so popular is cotton at the moment. One rose tulle evening dress in Greek lines had various tiny edgings of a delectable cream and blue, which proved to be none other than cretanne strips. Influenced in all probability by the Vatican election, a number of georgette gowns not only take over the color of the Cardinal's robe, but also the plice and wide cape touched with cretanne in harmonizing shades. A buzze gown of hyacinth blue crepe had insets of blue and yellow cretanne on skirt and bodice.

LONDON.—All-over lace, dyed to match the dress, is becoming increasingly popular here for both day and evening wear. Irish and Venice laces lead in favor, dyed to canary or lead green or periwinkle. Net is sometimes used instead of lace, also tinted to match the frock. With the dyed lace a rather snug, victorian sort of bodice is often used. The bodice is completely covered with an all-over pattern, while lace panels or medallions are set into the skirt. Picot edging is having wide vogue, even the most elaborate costumes displaying picoted edges on georgette, satins and crepes, while nowadays no length of ribbon is complete without it. Nail heads compete with cabochons in girdles and cuff ornaments.

"Out of Nowhere" A NEW ROMANCE

By Ruby Ayres

CHAPTER X.

She knew she would never like Florrie Jones; she did not believe in her offer of friendship, and she felt disturbed and unhappy.

What did she mean by her remark about Ronald Hastings? It was not in the least like a man in his position was going to even look at a girl in hers; and yet she felt herself to be his superior as she thought of the dead flower girl he had deserted, and the little son who had clung about her neck only that morning.

She went to Madame's office dispiritedly. A cloud seemed to have fallen over her spirits since Florrie Jones thrust her head and hand into the door of the dressing room.

Madame was writing at her desk, she always seemed to be writing. She glanced up for a second, then looked down at the pen she held. The pen flew as fast as Madame's tongue did when she was excited. Violet stood waiting patiently. There was a long glass in the wall in it she could see her reflection. A little thrill of pleasure went through her as she looked. It was wonderful, the difference that the well-cut gown made in her appearance, and the new style of hair when Violet put on her gloves and coat and left the dressing room.

She almost ran the few yards down the side street to the corner where she could get a bus home; there was one just at the curb. She hurriedly stepped on, catching it when she collided with a man coming in the opposite direction.

He was a big, heavy man; his weight would have been enough to knock her over had he not caught her and held her gently.

Violet looked up in annoyance. A sharp word trembled on her lips, then she saw the man's face. It was Ronald Hastings.

He was wearing a smart gray suit, with a small yellow rose in his buttonhole, and he was looking at her with a smile in his eyes behind the absurd monocle.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "I am very sorry, but we are so late to come across one another."

"There is no reason to be sorry," said Violet stiffly. "It was my fault. I was running; I am in a hurry."

He was in no way snubbed by her plain speaking; he even laughed a little. "I hope you like being at Violet's. I recognized you directly."

"Thank you, I like it very well. She was all eagerness to go on her way, but she was half-fraid of angering him; for, after all, reason told her that if he were in a position to help her forward with Madame, he was also in a position to get her instant dismissal."

She looked at him with a sort of unwilling interest. So this man was Ronald Hastings? Well, she could see little likeness to the dear little man at home; the hair was the same color, dark brown, but there the resemblance ended. Violet felt sorely glad that it was so.

"Scenes of girls, nice girls, are walking the streets on the North and South and West Sides," Rev. Thompson said—vigorously—"because they have no suitable place to entertain their beaux at home."

His methods by which Chicago clergymen may help to cut off each year's crop of divorces are three. He would—and does:

Bring men and women physicians into his pulpit once a year to lecture to the young men and young women on physical fitness.

Address every congregation once during the winter on the elements of love, courtship and marriage.

Open the doors of the churches in order that the couples who are walking the streets may have a chance to sit down and talk.

"The church has almost totally neglected physical instruction," Rev. Thompson said, seated at his desk in the offices of the Board of Home Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church. "It has taught doctrine, but it has omitted the lesson that ill-adaptation, physically, is often the basis for estrangement after marriage."

"Young people should be informed concerning the nature and elements of love. They should be told that"

swayed him then. "Nothing at all from your point of view, I dare say, but I hate condescension, and I have no intention of being patronized by you because you happen to be a rich man and I a poor girl more or less dependent on you for the position I hold now, and you can tell Madame every word I have said if you like," she added defiantly. "Good evening."

most thoughts and favorite dreams were of 18-guinea creations.

There was an exceptional number of black models in the consignment and Madame kept Violet behind with her after the smart consignment had drawn the velvet curtains and put up the iron gate in front of the shop. She made the girl try on and "parade," as she called it, till Violet nearly dropped with fatigue. She was never very strong, and she found the life trying, even though it was nothing like so hard as it had been at Gatwick's.

It was nearly 7 o'clock when at last she changed her gown and hurried out at the side door. She had arranged to meet Leslie Martin that evening, and she wanted to get home first to Ronnie and give him his tea and put him to bed. That hour with the boy was the one thing she looked forward to throughout the day. She counted the moments till she was free to rush off to him and play with him and hold him in her lap and tell him fairy stories.

She went out into the street now, fastidious and self-satisfied. All the other girls, except Florrie Jones, had left; Florrie always took twice as long as anybody else to dress herself; she was still arranging her feathered hat in front of the glass when Violet put on her gloves and coat and left the dressing room.

He was a big, heavy man; his weight would have been enough to knock her over had he not caught her and held her gently. Violet looked up in annoyance. A sharp word trembled on her lips, then she saw the man's face. It was Ronald Hastings.

:: :: New Creations Bags

THE season's new bags show many new notes of interest and beauty. A bag with a compartment in the center for millady's vanity is most convenient. Black mauve faced with white is in harmony with the present vogue for that combination.

Conspicuous among the new bags is a black bag with a white pocket. A unique affair, but with the same tone in brown.

Cozy Corners, Dim Lights in Church Parlors TO HELP CURE DIVORCE EVIL

Purpose of Courtship Is for Men and Women to Learn Peculiarities Before Making Life Pledges to Priest or Minister.

SOFAS for the church parlor. A chapter—if any—who knows a couple is company and three is a crowd.

In the vestibule a cozy corner or two or three. And lights that are not too—but stop, that is as far as Rev. John Thompson is willing to be quoted.

Dr. Thompson, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Chicago, whose nickname among his colleagues is "the marryin' parson" (because one year recently he joined more right and left hands together than any other minister in Chicago), preached a sermon to the effect that if Christ were alive today he would recognize more than one ground for divorce.

He charged that the angels of the church who they predicted the entrance of the purpose of courtship is for both the man and the woman to gain all necessary information concerning each other before coming to a priest or minister to be pledged for life.

Lastly, there should be explained to them the solemnity of the marriage pledges.

The pledges to which he refers are "Love and cherish until death do us part" and "Keep thee only unto her or unto him." The first, he claims, shows that marriage should be an indissoluble life partnership, the second that it is tremendously exclusive.

But now as to the "open door." "Scores of girls, nice girls, are walking the streets on the North and South and West Sides," Rev. Thompson said—vigorously—"because they have no suitable place to entertain their beaux at home."

Scores more of music and art and business students are walking because their "home" consists of a hall bedroom.

"And the church is kept shut up. It has gymnastics and libraries and moving pictures and swimming tanks, but no cozy corners. In my mind it is the corners that are most important."

"Religion shouldn't dehumanize us. If it did I wouldn't want it."

FRENCH ROLL PUDDING

BUTTER a medium-sized pudding dish. Break in pieces enough stale French rolls to equal two 8-oz. cupsful, butter each piece and place in the dish. Sprinkle with a half-cupful of sugar, add a half-cupful of chopped citron, raisins and nuts mixed and turn over a pint of hot milk. Cook, then add the yolk of three eggs beaten into a pint of milk and two teaspoonfuls of vanilla. Dust with a little nutmeg and bake. When done, take from the oven and spread with a layer of quince jelly, beat the egg whites stiff with a little powdered sugar, and spread a meringue over the top. Brown delicately in the oven. This pudding is good hot or cold.

Despite the fact that she is 192 years of age, Mrs. Mary Convey of Omaha, Neb., is an ardent boxing fan and only recently sat at the ringside of a boxing bout held in Sioux City, Ia.

Two Persons Meet

That should meet the test—To do the best.

JUMPER the Bear and Jimmy Skunk the foot of a tree in the Forest. Had you along there you would see him. At least I doubt it. Or, if you had seen him, you wouldn't have known him in the least. All the Green Forest were little snow. Jumper was so small that he seldom noticed the took no notice of this something moved down Jumper's eyes opened and he watched. A sharp with very bright eyes the finest bit and in a sharp little face with eyes disappeared, but it was back and the bright eyes were fixed on Jumper. After a long stare the eyes came out of the bushes. It was a trim little fellow, brown coat with white spots and white feet and a white tail. It was Whitefoot Mouse, sometimes called Mouse.

Whitefoot suddenly darted. Jumper didn't move, eyes widened with fear. White foot had just caught him. Jumper looked interested. "I'm a very timid person, sometimes I have been a bit of a coward. I think of it. I guess you and the more timid I am the more likely I am to be a coward."

"Gracious, Jumper, how you scare me!" said he. Jumper chuckled. "I believe you are more scared than I am," he replied.

"Why shouldn't I be? I'm much smaller and I'm an enemy," retorted Whitefoot. "It is true you are much smaller than I am, but I'm not an enemy. I'm a friend."

"Name them," Jumper said. "Hoity the Great Owl, Fowler the Bob Cat, Old Reddy Fox, Tawny Shadow the Weasel, and Jumper himself."

"Is that all?" Jumper asked. "Isn't that enough? Jumper rather sharply. 'I have all of them in the Crow and Snipe and Sammy Jay in the wood.'

MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB

A STICKLER FOR THE CODE.

A SURVIVOR of Mosby's cavalry told me this one, years ago, as illustrative of the German's love for regularity and orderly routine in all the affairs of life.

It would seem that a Bavarian immigrant joined a Union regiment and in the third year of the war was sent to Virginia. One night he imbibed too heavily of strong drink and fell asleep in a corner. When he awakened he discovered that during the night a negro camp follower had stolen his uniform, leaving behind a ragged civilian outfit. The German clothed himself in these tatters and set out to find his command.

Presently another and even more disagreeable circumstance than the theft of his wardrobe impressed itself upon him. By certain signs he was made aware that the Federal forces had withdrawn from their old positions and the enemy had advanced so that he was now inside the foe's lines.

As he limped toward the rear, hoping to overtake the retreating force, a squad of ragged gray troopers came whirling out of a thicket and surrounded him. Quite frankly he told them who and what he was, and they made a prisoner out of him.

Presently his captors halted him where a tree limb stretched across the road, and one of the Southerners, removing a plow line from his saddle bow, proceeded to fashion a slip-noose in one end of it. The captive inquired of the Lieutenant in command what the purpose of all this might be.

"Why," said the Lieutenant, "we're going to treat you as we would any Yank caught inside of our lines in disguise. Under the laws of war we're going to hang you as a spy."

"Veil," said the German, "votefir is der rule!"

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

By James J. Montague.

THE LAST LEAF.
(Not Dr. Holmes' Version)

We used to hear her sigh
As she tottered feebly by,
Poor old dame!
Of her proud estate bereft;
Little worth possessing left
But her name.

But she passes by us now
With a high and haughty brow,
And a frock
Cut so low—and eke so high—
That it gives a modest eye
Quite a shock.

One can glimpse her silken hose
And the color of the rose
On her lips,
And one readily may see
That her shoes are from Paroe
As she trips.

Though her age we may not guess,
It is sixty more or less.
All the same
When she's half a block away
"Lamp the flapper, lads," we say,
"Some swell dame!"

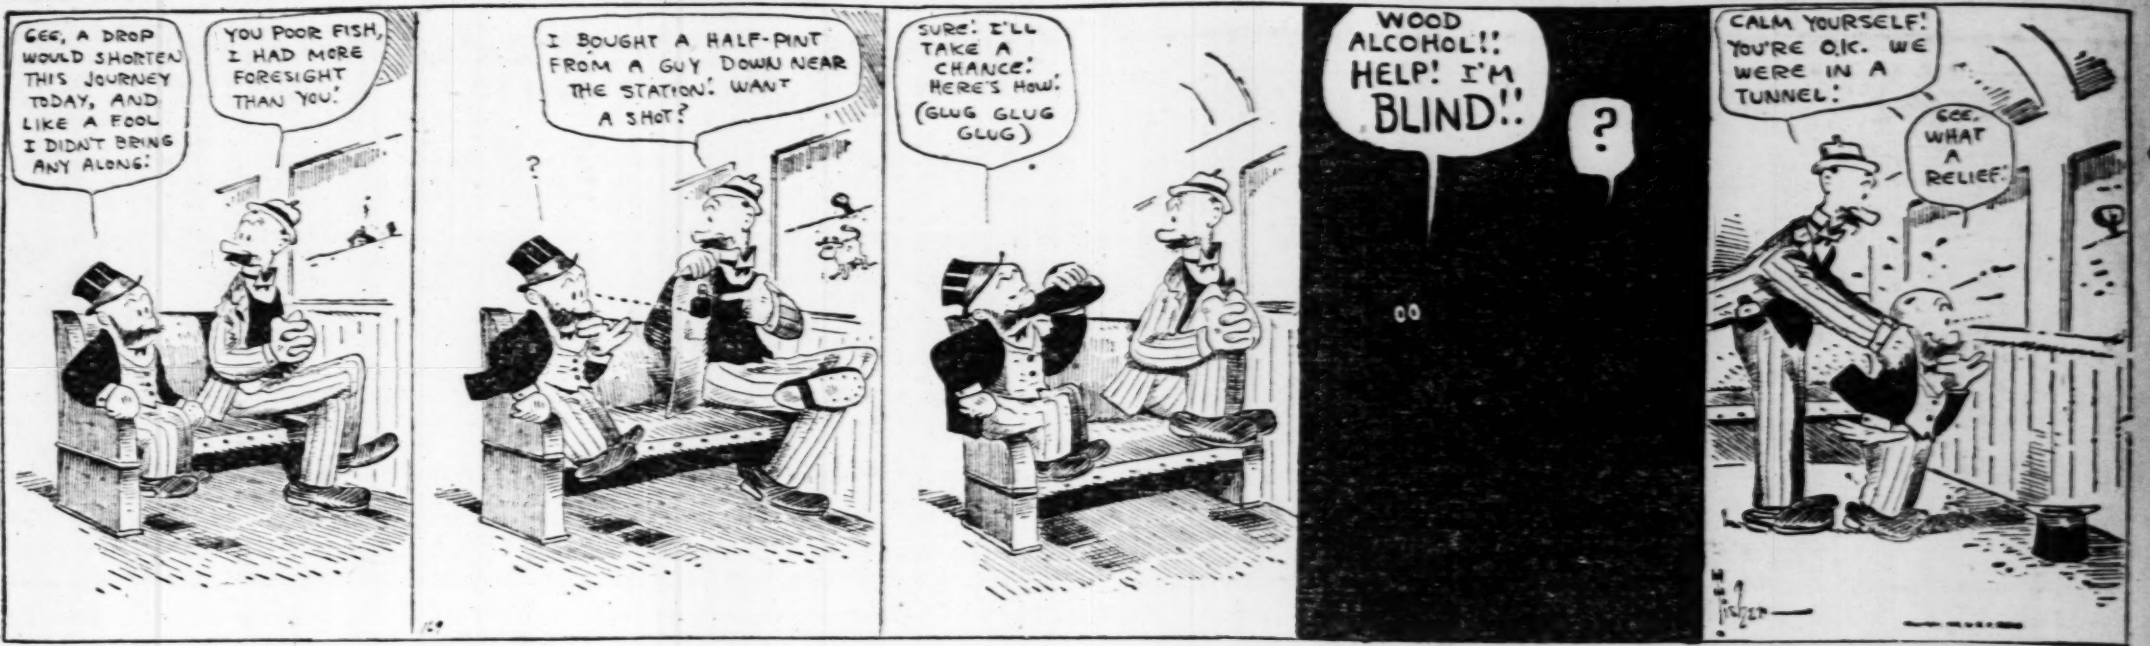

Not for her to droop and fade
Like the leaves that fall decayed
From the limb.
If you fancy there's a chance
Watch her sometimes at a dance
Where they shine!

Unbecoming? Maybe so,
In one doomed so soon to go,
Poor old thing!
Yet upon life's little stage
Youth has no more right than age
To its fling!
